CONVICT, FREE ON MONTH FURLOUGH, ADMITS 7 HOLDUPS

Youth Sent to Boonville Reformatory in May, Caught in Auto He Had Stolen.

FREEDOM GIVEN IN VIOLATION OF LAW

Circuit Judge Ossing to Cite Supt. Harrison for Contempt; Parole Twice Refused.

A month's holiday furlough from Boonville Reformatory gave a 17-year-old highwayman an opportunity to resume his criminal career as an oil station robber. He didn't overlook the chance, and added seven more robberies to his list.

The leave expires today, and George Roloff is due back in Boonville, but he occupies a cell at Dayton Street Police Station. Last June, when sentenced to the Reformatory for five years, he attributed his downfall to liquor and girls, but now he blames gambling.

Was Refused Parole.

Supt. C. M. Harrison of the reformatory today assumed responsibility for the furlough. In a telegram to the Post-Dispatch, he said he gave Roloff a month's freedom on representations by his stepfather that the boy's mother was seriously ill in St. Louis. Roloff had a good record since entering the reformatory on June 24, Harrison added.

Circuit Judge Ossing, who committed Roloff to the reformatory, expressed indignation at his being at large, and said he would cite Supt. Harrison for contempt of court, had not been transferred this week from the Juvenile Court. Harrison was absolutely without authority in letting Roloff out, even temporarily, Judge Ossing said.

Judge Ossing revealed that he had been asked to grant a holiday furlough to Roloff, and had refused. Later, while Roloff was at large, through Supt. Harrison's action, Roloff's parents and his uncle, George Dominick, professional bondsman, visited Judge Ossing and asked that he be paroled altogether. This also was refused. Judge Ossing was not informed until later that Roloff had been allowed a months' furlough, against the court's wishes.

At 4 o'clock this morning, Roloff parked a stolen coupe outside a restaurant at 907 North Grand boulevard, and started to enter. Patrolman George Schrameyer, on the alert for a "neatly dressed, slender young robber," arrested him. At the station, Roloff confessed seven holdups since Dec. 3, but couldn't recall any others, which, police believe, he may have committed. Oil station managers have been invited to view him.

"I don't want to go back to Boonville," the prisoner told reporters. "I'd rather go to the penitentiary, where I could learn a trade. All I learned at Boonville was how to 'stick up' people, and other kinds of crime."

Arrested in Stolen Auto.

The automobile, which Roloff was using when arrested, was the property of Clarence Leritz, 7378 Hazel avenue, Maplewood, a former Assistant Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis County. He and Miss Virginia Richardson, 3136 Edgar avenue, were seated in the car, in front of her home, last night, when Roloff held them up, robbed Leritz of $17 and drove away in the car. Finding Miss Richardson's purse, containing $2, in the car, he took the money and threw away the purse.

Before his career was interrupted by his arrest at 3 o'clock on the morning of May 20 last, Roloff committed nine oil station holdups in eight nights, obtaining a total of $397. One of these robberies was at the station, at Theresa and Washington avenues, where he got $55. On Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve, in the second series of holdups while on holiday parole, he robbed the station manager there of $30 each time.

Other station holdups, while on parole, and the amounts taken, were: Ewing street and Pine boulevard, $27; Pennsylvania avenue and Manchester road, $35; Hanley road and Delmar boulevard, $17, and Kirkwood and Washington roads, car and manager's automobile, latter abandoned.

Had Lost in Dice Game.

In a few words, Roloff told why he resumed robberies. "I've been shooting dice, and losing, and besides I like to play pool and bowl," he said. "I had to get money some way, and I wasn't working."

His first criminal adventure, he

TWO MEN BEAT POLICEMAN, TIE HIM IN GARAGE

Patrolman John McLoughlin Forced Into Place by Pair He Had Stopped to Question.

WAS ON LOOKOUT FOR STOLEN AUTO

Officer, Bound, Is Found by Woman Who Notifies the Police — Assailants Unidentified.

Patrolman John McLoughlin, 45 years old, of the Angelica Street District, was forced into a garage in the rear of 4230 Margaretta avenue, beaten on the head with a revolver and left bound with automobile tire chains and ropes shortly before noon today by two unidentified men whom he had sought to question about a stolen automobile.

He was found and released 10 minutes later by Mrs. Margaret Carroll of the Margaretta avenue address, who investigated upon hearing his cries. She notified the police. Capt. Stinger of the Angelica District hurried to the place. The men had escaped in a stolen Buick touring car, which they are believed to have left in the garage previously. McLoughlin was treated for scalp wounds at the city hospital and later went to his station to make a report.

The attack occurred only about an hour after McLoughlin had been instructed by Capt. Stinger to keep a lookout for the men and the car, recently reported stolen. The policeman, in relating his experience, said he met the men walking on Natural Bridge at Clarence avenue, and they inquired where they could get a taxicab, explaining they were Kansas City automobile dealers and had been visiting a friend in the neighborhood. His suspicions were aroused and he searched and questioned them.

When they couldn't tell who resided at the Margaretta avenue address where they said the "friend" lived, the officer decided to investigate further and accompanied them to the place, entering through an alley. As he passed the garage in the rear, he looked in and saw the stolen Buick, but before he could draw his revolver, the men "covered" him and forced him inside the place, struck him on the head and bound him. They then drove away in the Buick.

Mrs. Carroll said two young men rented the garage several days ago, but she had not seen them since. She did not know, she said, that a machine had been left there.

The garage is only a few blocks from the place on Athlone avenue where Patrolman William A. Dillon was killed by the Lewis brothers in April, 1916.

RECLUSE BURIED LIKE KING TUT IN HALF TON CASKET

Joseph Marconnot Directs That His Body Be on View for Years Under Glass Top.

COST OF BRONZE COFFIN IS $2700

Vault to Be Open to Public on Church Holidays Set Aside for Veneration of Dead.

In a hermetically sealed bronze casket weighing half a ton and costing $2700, the body of Joseph Marconnot, Carondelet recluse, who directed in his will that his body be prepared for burial by a process of mummification like that used on King Tutankhamen and other Egyptian sovereigns, was placed today in the family vault at Mount Olive Cemetery, following services at St. Boniface Catholic Church, 7700 Michigan avenue.

The weight of the casket, of a type seldom used except in the burial of notables, required unusual effort on the part of the eight pallbearers who carried it, and its size necessitated changes in the construction of the vault. Relatives and friends will be admitted to view the body on request, and the vault will be opened to the public on church holidays set aside for veneration of the dead.

Marconnot requested in his will that persons be allowed to view his body through the glass top of his casket.

Had Few Close Friends.

Marconnot made few close associations in life, and this was reflected in his funeral, attended by a small number of relatives and friends. Only several hundred persons, the majority curiosity seekers, viewed the magnificent casket and the super-embalmed remains at the undertaker's parlor and at the home, 7528 Virginia avenue, where Marconnot lived for the last 30 years.

Preparation of Marconnot's body for indefinite preservation and exhibition, however, caused general discussion among local undertakers and embalmers, according to James J. Fitzgerald, president of the Southern Undertaking Co., and the St. Louis Undertakers' Association, who Marconnot directed should have charge of the funeral. The discussion will become national among members of his profession, according to Fitzgerald, who said embalmers from all parts of the country probably will make pilgrimages to the Marconnot vault in future years.

Fitzgerald borrowed from the art of the ancient Egyptian undertakers in preparing the body for preservation. Following instructions in Marconnot's will, the internal organs, including the brain, were removed and buried in a plot adjoining the vault. The body was filled with sawdust and a plaster preparation, and wrapped in closely knit bandages. The face and hands were treated with a preparation and cosmetics then applied to produce a lifelike appearance.

Marconnot's wish that his body be preserved indefinitely is not attributed to vanity by his relatives, but to a horror of decomposition after death. He became interested in the art of preserving a body about five years ago, when he made his will, and is said to have read all available accounts of the finding of the mummy of King Tutankhamen in the Valley of the Kings. He directed in his will that a minimum of $3000 be expended for his funeral. Fitzgerald said that the funeral, including the bronze casket, cost $3500.

The residue of Marconnot's estate, estimated at $70,000, is to be divided, according to the will, among Joseph and Thomas de Bouny, nephews, and Mrs. E. L. Sallee, a niece. Marconnot was 64 years old and spent the early years of his life as a truck gardener in Carondelet. Death occurred a week ago.

Parker Claims Bulk of House Votes for Speaker

Absolves Baker of Part in Call by Phares for G. O. P. Caucus Monday.

Although a well-defined opposition to the candidacy of Jones H. Parker for the speakership of the House of Representatives has developed in the St. Louis delegation, Parker departed today for Jefferson City confident he will be chosen to wield the gavel in the lower House.

Parker claims 36 out-State votes have been pledged to him, and that only three members of the St. Louis delegation of 19 are in opposition. Forty votes will obtain the caucus nomination.

Parker Absolves Baker.

While politicians see the hand of Gov. Hyde and some members of the Republican State organization who are favorable to Edward H. Winter of Warren County, Parker's most formidable opponent, in a call sent out yesterday by W. F. Phares, chairman of the Republican State Committee, for a caucus of Representatives Monday night at Jefferson City, Parker believes that Governor-elect Baker had no part in it. Baker assured Parker, when the latter visited him some time ago, that he would assume a "hands-off" policy in regard to the selection of a speaker.

Gov. Hyde, on the other hand, favors Winter, and the fact that Chairman Phares set a precedent when he called a meeting of legislators, is traceable to Hyde's influence in Phares' election to head the party organization.

Local opposition to Parker yesterday took form in a luncheon of St. Louis Representatives at the American Hotel, to which Winter was invited by those opposing Parker. Parker and 14 other members of the St. Louis delegation attended.

The contest for the chair of the House apparently lies between Parker and Winter, although there are other aspirants. Two of these, David W. Peters of Cole County and H. S. Bales of Newton County, will withdraw in favor of Parker if he impresses them as a winner. John W. Campbell of Cedar County and William F. Weinrich of St. Charles County also are candidates.

The rift in the St. Louis delegation is likely to militate against the St. Louisan's chances, for without the unanimous support of the members some desertions by his out-State support are probable.

15 PASSENGERS HURT IN BOSTON SUBWAY EXPLOSION

Thirteen Windows Broken by Blast Believed Caused by Motion Picture Film.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—An explosion in a subway car, probably caused by motion picture films, sent 55 passengers into a stampede through broken windows today, injuring more than a score. Fifteen required hospital treatment.

The car, bound from the north station to Dudley street, was between Boylston and Park streets when the explosion occurred. Thirteen windows blew out with the concussion. The passengers went into a panic. Through the jagged windows they pushed themselves out, or were forced, and those that were not injured by the glass were hurt by falling, or by those who fell on them.

The flames and smoke from the car caused excitement at Park street station. There was a mild stampede there also and several persons were injured.

JUDGE DENOUNCES MRS. SWEETIN IN SENTENCING HER

Believes Jury Would Have Been Warranted in Imposing Heavier Penalty Than 35 Years, He Says.

STRONGER MIND THAN HIGHT, HE ASSERTS

Jurist Tells of Changing Mind About Woman During Joint Trial With Former Minister.

By the Associated Press.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Jan. 3.—Judge J. C. Kern today overruled a motion for a new trial for Mrs. Elsie Sweetin and Lawrence M. Hight, deposed pastor, convicted of the murder by poison of the woman's husband, Wilford Sweetin, and formally passed sentence of life imprisonment on the man and 35 years on the woman.

Hight will serve in the Southern Illinois penitentiary at Menard and Mrs. Sweetin in the Illinois prison at Stateville.

The former minister displayed no emotion as sentence was passed. Mrs. Sweetin's eyes filled with tears as Judge Kern declared, in passing sentence upon her, that he was convinced she was equally as guilty as Hight and the jury would have been fully warranted from the evidence in imposing a sentence equally as severe.

Judge's Remarks to Woman.

"I changed m" mind about you during the course of this trial, Mrs. Sweetin," the Judge said. "At first, I thought you might have been led into this crime by the urging of your co-defendant, but now I am convinced that you have a stronger mind than Hight.

"The evidence shows that your husband died from poison and you said you gave him poison three times, once in candy, once in oatmeal and once in tomato soup. It takes a lot of cruelty and a lot of nerve to do a thing like that. It took a cruel heart to witness the suffering of the man who had been your husband for sixteen years and to see him get better and then give him more poison.

"Now your husband is dead and you must go to prison and leave your children without a mother or father. You have blighted their lives and why, I cannot understand, but I have nothing harsh to say to you.

Sorry for Mrs. Sweetin.

"I am sorry for you. I know of nothing I can say to you except that you should try to get yourself right with God while in prison and repent for the awful deed you have committed."

"I will say quite frankly that I cannot understand such conduct."

After sentence had been passed, Attorney Nelson Layman, who represented Hight, said:

"I am firmly convinced that Lawrence M. Hight is not of sound mind. He should be treated in a hospital as any other sick man. Mr. Hight will most likely spend some time in the criminal insane hospital at Menard."

POLICEMAN FINDS JIMMIED DOOR; WAITS FOR BURGLAR

Patrolman Lang Arrests Man Who Tries to Carry Off Stove on Sidewalk.

A jimmied door and a new stove standing on the walk outside the furniture store of Joe Kovarik, 1312 Seventh boulevard, at 11 o'clock last night, attracted the attention of Patrolman Albert Lang.

Concluding that he had surprised a burglar at work, the policeman drew his revolver and entered the store. He found no one inside, however, and telephoned to the Soulard Station for reinforcements against the robber's possible return.

While he was waiting in the store a man approached the stove in the walk and started to carry it away. The policeman arrested him. In his pockets were a flashlight and a large screwdriver.

"I have a sick baby at home," he told Capt. Kirk. 'If you wanted to keep a sick child warm and had no stove you'd steal one, too." Policemen sent to a Rutger street address, given by the prisoner, reported they could find no sick child and the place seemed moderately well heated.

YEAR'S REBELLION OF RHODE ISLAND SENATORS COMES TO AN ENDING

Democratic Filibuster for Constitutional Convention Is Given Up as Failure and Session Adjourned.

LAWMAKERS FLED AFTER GAS ATTACK

Twenty Sought Refuge in Hotel at Rutland, Mass., Where They Had Special Armed Guards.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 3.—One of the most remarkable political episodes in the history of the United States, ended today. A year ago, almost to the day, 16 Democratic Senators and one Independent began to filibuster against the Republican majority of 22 Senators.

The filibuster ended yesterday when three Senators, two Democrats and one Republican, seated in the Senate chamber here, adjourned until Tuesday at 1 o'clock.

At 12 o'clock Tuesday the new Legislature will be sworn in, as the old Senate, which has met officially four times a week since last January, never will have another session.

Today the Republican Senators who fled to Rutland, Mass., in ostensible fear of their lives on June 21 returned to their homes triumphant. The new Legislature will be overwhelmingly Republican, which the exiled Senators interpret as a popular victory for themselves.

In a ramshackle hotel in Rutland the 20 Republican Senators have lived in comfort, with nothing to do but sleep, eat, play games and listen to the radio for nearly seven months.

"One Man" Sessions.

One of them, Senator Jesse H. Hopkins, died a voluntary exile from his State. One, Frederick B. Cole, a former Episcopalian minister, has become a lecturer in Worcester, Mass., and is unlikely to return. Another, Harry A. Sanderson, has remained behind in Providence to attend the meetings of the Democratic handful to bring up the question of the absence of a quorum, preventing them from doing business.

At many of the sessions of the Senate in recent months, the Senate body in session consisted of none other than Sanderson. He would offer a motion to adjourn and automatically the Senate stood adjourned.

The Republican State Central Committee, to which most of the wealthy mill owners and bankers of Rhode Island are generous contributors, has supported the exiled Republican Senators. The Republicans admit the cost of maintaining the Senators in the Rutland Hotel has passed $25,000. The Democrats insist the figure is much closer to $100,000.

Visited by Wives.

To the last the Republican Senators have preserved an armed guard at the hotel. In recent months the guard has dwindled to two men, one a former Providence policeman, the other former Deputy Sheriff. Their stay, which began in summer, had lengthened out so the proprietor of the old Bartleby House put in steam heat for the benefit of the Senators a few weeks ago. Since then he has determined to make his hotel a winter resort on the basis of the publicity the Senators' exile has provided.

Republicans deny the Senators have been reimbursed for more than their hotel bills. Democrats insist they have been paid, too, for the losses their businesses have suffered. But under any circumstances they have had a glorious time. Their wives and children have been frequent visitors to the refugees at the expense of the Republican committee.

So closely has their exile bonded them that when the Senators received word that it was all over today many of them groaned. When one Senator sneaked home to Rhode Island a few nights ago his wife leaned happily across the table to him.

"It's so nice to have a home dinner again," she said.

"Yes," he answered, "it's fine, but—"

DEBT DISCUSSION BY FRENCH AND BRITISH PLANNED

England Not to Object to Any Arrangements Paris Officials Make With United States.

FINANCE EXPERTS WILL CONFER

Britain Will Accept More Favorable Terms With America if Offered, but Will Not Insist.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—France's indebtedness and her intentions regarding it are certain to be discussed in Paris next week by British and French officials during the period of the conference of Finance Ministers, according to political opinion here. In order to allow time for these other discussions, outside the agenda of the conference itself, Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will go to Paris on Jan. 6, the day before the conference opens, it was learned today.

The British, it is forecast, will tell the French, as American officials have already learned informally, that this country will not object to the United States making what terms she likes with France, but that Great Britain will hold herself free to make arrangements with France independently of any terms France may make with the United States. The only stipulation by the British was, is, and will be that Great Britain's debtors, if they make arrangements, will be expected by the British to pay Great Britain proportionately, simultaneously, pari passu. This is the minimum requirement. If the British can get more they will hold themselves free to do so.

Official Interpretation.

This is the current and official interpretation of the speech Churchill made in the House of Commons Dec. 3. The British policy remains as it was then outlined. As for Great Britain's debt to America, she does not purpose asking for most favored nation terms, but naturally will accept them if they are offered her. If they are not offered then she will stand by the settlement already made with Washington.

OPPOSITION LIKELY ON INTEREST RATE

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—France's bid for a settlement for her obligations to the United States contained in a note from Finance Minister Clementel now on the way, is hailed as the first step towards taking the war debts out of the domain of politics into that of business.

The State Department's only official notice came in a message yesterday from Ambassador Herrick announcing the dispatch of the message, and pending the receipt of the text the administration's comment is limited to expression of satisfaction that the President's original refusal to accept the published interpretation of Clementel's report to the French Parliament as suggesting repudiation was justified.

While the formal opening of negotiations is a source of great gratification, it doesn't follow that the terms indicated in Paris dispatches are acceptable. These are a 10-year moratorium, the spreading of payments over a 90-year period, and the cutting of the interest to a nominal rate—one and a half per cent according to one report and half of one per cent according to another.

The interest rate is likely to be the sticking point. The moratorium feature, and the long time were both suggested in Ambassador Jusserand's recent conversations with Secretary Mellon, but the small interest rate is a new element.

Opposition in Congress.

Congress is hardly likely to consent to that, inasmuch as our own Government is paying from three and one-half to four and one-half per cent on the Liberty bonds that furnished the money represented by the loans to France, England and other countries. Congress even demurred at the English settlement—three and a half per cent interest for 10 years and three thereafter—though it finally came around to it.

However, the first offer does not represent more than a basis of negotiation and if the Debt Commission can work out a compromise it may get by Congress, where there is considerable sentiment to give France better terms than England got because of her inferior financial position.

Dispatches from London stating that Great Britain would make no objection to France's getting off easier, provided that France make the same contract for the payment of her debt to the British is taken in some quarters to mean that Great Britain is prepared to abandon her contention that, if any other nation is allowed to refund by a more advantageous arrangement this country ought to modify the terms of payment imposed on England.

Commission Expected.

One story was set at rest at the White House yesterday—that was that the visit of Gov. Norman and Director Sir Alan Anderson of the Bank of England, had anything to do with the debt question, the British embassy gave out the information that the two bank officials were in this country on banking business and were not expected to visit Washington.

The presumption is that Clementel's note will be followed by the coming to Washington of a French commission authorized to make a definite agreement.

Reports that France may be asking for remission of the interest charges over the 10-year period are discounted. Most officials conversant with conditions believed that the French were too well acquainted with the American attitude toward cancellation of the debt in whole or in part to propose such an arrangement.

The way toward settlement of the war claims tangle is said to be viewed by the State Department today as having been measurably cleared by the British reply to the American note which has been received here. With the Washington response to be dispatched before the meeting of the allied Finance Ministers in Paris Wednesday, Secretary Hughes is said to believe the note exchanges would dispose of the question.

United States Ambassadors Frank Kellogg at Lordon, and Myron T. Herrick at Paris, with Col. James A. Logan, will represent the Washington Government at the allied finance Ministers' conference in Paris next Wednesday.

The department had sent urgent requests to Ambassador Herrick asking him to send the text of the communication but a batch of overnight cables contained no answer to the inquiry.

CONSERVATIVES IN FRANCE ANGRY AT FINANCE MINISTER

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Paris, Jan. 3.—A note by the Finance Minister, handed to Ambassador Herrick, Tuesday evening, is intended as the opening of negotiations with the American Treasury Department.

While tentative in its terms and described as "unofficial," it suggests a moratorium, possibly of 10 years, and after that interest terms comparable to those granted to Great Britain by the United States.

News of the Government's action, inconclusive as it is, has brought down the wrath of the conservatives on the heads of Finance Minister Clementel and Premier Herriot.

Washington's request for a definite proposition—which brought Clementel's tentative offer—evoked bitter comment in the newspaper La Liberte by Jacques Bainville, who said that "Shylock is a Senator and lives in Washington." America is compared taoninunnn rich King who coveted everything even to the poor vineyard of Naboth.

"Bible lovers have forgotten the Bible" the article concludes bitterly after the strongest attack against America that has been printed for years in Paris.

INQUEST VERDICT ACCUSES CONTRACTOR IN WIFE'S DEATH

Badly Gashed Body of Omaha Woman Was Found at Foot of Stairway.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 3.—A Coroner's jury investigating the death of Mrs. Mae Hahne, whose badly gashed body was found at the foot of the stairway in the basement of her home yesterday afternoon, this noon recommended that her husband, John W. Hahne, Omaha contractor and real estate man, be held on a charge of first degree murder.

Hahne declares that he knew nothing of the affair until he arrived home with a plumber yesterday afternoon.

A hatchet and a hammer, each with strands of hair and small clots of blood clinging to them, were found hanging over Hahne's work bench in the basement, detectives declare. A suit of work clothes, with blood on the suspenders, was also found, according to the police report. Twelve deep gashes, several of them three and four inches long, had been inflicted on the woman's head, while the knuckles on her right hand had been broken and cut in an attempt at defense, according to the theory.

That robbery might have been a motive for the deed is being investigated by police. Two diamond rings valued at $1000 each are missing. However, two valuable diamond earrings had been left untouched.

Mrs Hahne was formerly May Schaeffer of Colorado Springs, Colo., and was Hahne's second wife. She is survived by her husband, a brother, Edward Schaeffer of Tulsa, Ok., and her two sisters, Mrs. Herman Rothcraff and Mrs. Charles Lee Croix, both of Denver.

CONGRESSMAN'S WIFE TAKES STAND IN DIVORCE CASE

Says Husband's Secretary Was Told to "Keep an Eye on His Little Canary."

WANTED TO KNOW IF SHE "STEPPED OUT"

Miss Kennedy Tells of Mrs. Scott's Alleged Indiscretions With Officer and Hotel Clerk.

By the Associated Press.

ALPENA, Mich., Jan. 3.—Mrs. Edna James Scott, contesting the suit for divorce brought by Congressman Frank D. Scott, took the stand in her own behalf when the hearing was resumed in Circuit Court here today. Accused yesterday by Miss Jane Kennedy, secretary to her husband, of having told of numerous occasions on which she received the clerk of a Washington hotel in her rooms late at night and other alleged indiscretions, Mrs. Scott declared Miss Kennedy was not an intimate friend of hers.

"When we went to Washington, I rarely saw her," Mrs. Scott testified. "At first I was kind and introduced her to people. Then for weeks I would not see her."

Miss Kennedy once laughingly remarked in her presence, Mrs Scott testified, that Scott had asked her "to keep an eye" on Mrs. Scott when he was away. "She said," Mrs. Scott declared, "that 'the boss asked me if his "canary" ever stepped out and told me to keep an eye on her when he was away.'"

Miss Kennedy is named by Mrs Scott in her cross bill as the disturbing element in the Scott home. Mrs. Scott accuses her of being responsible for the breaking up of her home "Through malicious tale bearing."

The court room again was crowded today.

Scott Quizzed Her Five Days, Secretary Testified Yesterday.

An $18 nightgown, liquor parties, liaisons and the loyalty of a secretary for the man for whom she had worked 15 years were all jumbled up in yesterday's testimony.

Miss Jane Kennedy, secretary to the Congressman for 15 years, whose stories of Mrs. Scott's alleged indiscretions, as told to her by the wife, caused the rift in the Scott household, took the stand with a smile and for four hours faced a courtroom packed to the doors with people who had known "Jen Kennedy" all her life.

"Didn't Want to Tell."

"I didn't want to tell about Mrs. Scott; I did not think it would cause a break in their home; Mr. Scott came to me, paced the floor, begged and implored that I would tell the truth. He said he knew I knew something, but he didn't know what. For five days he quizzed me. He told me I owed it to both Mrs. Scott and himself to tell. He said if he knew, he might protect both Mrs. Scott and himself. He said he would take her away and begin again."

Then Miss Kennedy told again the stories of the alleged indiscretions of Mrs. Scott with Capt. "Jazzbo" Sumner, now at Camp Hill, and with Harry Wyckoff, clerk at the Wardman Park Hotel, Washington.

While Miss Kennedy talked, Mr. and Mrs. Scott glared at each other across the narrow counsel table. When a question of the party in the room of Capt. Sumner arose and Mrs. Scott's diary was given to the Judge, there was an argument over whether the notations, "Capt. Sumner, Fort Myers—20 guests" or whether it was "no guests."

"It's no guests," roared Scott.

"It's 20 guests," hissed Mrs. Scott and they both arose from their seats. The Judge said he would make his ruling later.

Scott Writes Statement.

Then Scott took his seat, smiled at the courtroom and wrote the following statement:

"Any woman who would or could desecrate my home and my honor, as I believe I have proved Mrs. Scott did, would not hesitate to perjure her soul to complete her destruction of his honor and reputation."

Miss Kennedy testified that Mrs. Scott had told of gay rides in a roadster with Capt. Sumner in the rumble seat. "We were scared to death he'd fall out and kill himself, he was so drunk," she testified Mrs. Scott said.

"Mrs. Scott boasted of having met Harry Wyckoff in a vacant apartment of the Wardmen Park Hotel, where she said good-bye to him because Miss Kennedy and another friend were in her own apartment," Miss Kennedy said.

Asked About $18 Nightgown.

"Didn't you have an $18 nightgown made for a trip to Alpena in a stateroom with Mr. and Mrs. Scott?" Moss Peck, attorney for Mrs. Scott, asked.

"Mr and Mrs. Scott and I traveled in a stateroom together on one occasion because we could not get berths. That was the only time. I slept on the couch, Mrs. Scott had the lower berth and Mr. Scott the upper.

"Mrs. Scott always told me that she liked to have me with her at the apartment because as long as she was with me her husband trusted her.

Mrs. Scott also wanted me to be sure and meet Capt Sumner and tell Mr Scott the Captain was interested in me. Then she wanted to plan a trip, a foursome to Panama or some place. I was just a blind and I was terrified all the time I was in Mrs. Scott's apartment for fear some man would call on her and Mr Scott would come home and blame me for protecting her."

Miss Kennedy said she never saw Mrs. Scott entertain a man nor heard one call on the telephone, but all she knew of Mrs. Scott's conduct was from Mrs. Scott's own lips. "She told me if I ever told Mr Scott she'd just deny it and that would be all there was to it," Miss Kennedy snapped.

CONVICT HIDES IN LOAD OF HOT ASHES, MAKES HIS ESCAPE

Jumps From Fiery Hiding-place to Passing Auto, Getting Away on Foot After Chase.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—John Campbell, a convict, secreted himself beneath a load of hot ashes on a five-ton motor truck and unmolested by guards, yesterday rode to freedom through the gates of the Eastern Penitentiary.

Campbell stifled moans of pain until the truck was a block away. Then he leaped upon the running board of an approaching sedan belonging to the prison.

Pressing a pistol against the neck of Charles Krout, the prison guard chauffeur, Campbell compelled him to drive away at breakneck speed. Campbell continued his wild ride until the extreme northeastern section of the city was reached.

Here he beat the chauffeur into unconsciousness with a hammer, and stole his overcoat. From a passerby he snatched a green cloth cap and escaped on foot.

ELEVEN INCHES OF SNOW HALTS NEW YORK TRAFFIC

Street Cars Tied Up in Downtown District—Many Steamships Overdue.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—All of Forecaster Scarr's promises of snow came true yesterday, on the first day of business of the new year. At 11:30 last night, nearly 18 hours after the storm began, the city barely had escaped complete paralysis of traffic. The storm had ceased, but many important thoroughfares were still choked with disabled and snowbound vehicles. It was estimated the snowfall was 11.6 inches.

Cars of the Fourth and Madison avenue line were tied up from Park Row and Broadway to Canal. Trolley lines in the outlying sections of the city experienced great difficulty in operation because of snow-clogged or frozen switches.

The White Star liner Adriatic is not expected before Tuesday. The steamer Assiria is already six days late, and is expected to make port tonight or tomorrow. The Mount Clay, out of Hamburg, is two days late and the French liner Paris will be about a day late.

The storm caused a postponement in the departure of the U. S. S. Arkansas and 10 destroyers on the first leg of their cruise to Southern waters for winter maneuvers. They were scheduled to sail yesterday.

Four steamers, besides the Mohawk, were reported in trouble during the past 24 hours. They were the United States Shipping Board steamer Belleck, from Liverpool to New York, crippled by a broken throttle valve; the British steamer Ulooloo, which ran ashore on the New Jersey coast and then made her way back to safe water; and the French steamer Dahomey and the Rumanian ship Carcait, details of whose plights were lacking.

$100,000 BONDS STOLEN IN RONDOUT HOLDUP RECOVERED

Securities Unearthed in Little Rock, Ark., Part of Share of One of Men Convicted in Case.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 3.—One hundred thousand dollars in bonds, a part of the loot in the Rondout (Ill.) mail robbery last June, according to police, are in the hands of Postoffice Inspectors, and interest in the case has shifted to the question of prosecution of Little Rock men who are said to have known about the stolen securities, their whereabouts and disposition. No announcement of possible arrests followed finding of $79,000 in bonds in a mail box west of Little Rock yesterday. The discovery yesterday followed announcement of the recovery of $21,000 here, also part of the loot.

The bonds recovered are said to be a part of the share of Herbert Holliday, now serving sentence of 25 years, in the train holdup. Holliday is confined in Leavenworth Federal prison.

A former cellmate of Holliday, when the latter was confined in Chicago, came to Little Rock and obtained lodging in the same apartment with Mrs. Ellen Holliday, the mail robber's wife, and Helen McNeil, his niece. A handbag said to have been checked to Hot Springs shortly afterward by Holliday's fall companion, was seized by Federal agents, and in it were $21,000 in bonds.

Mrs. Holliday and Miss McNeil were arrested in Memphis, though so far as known no formal charge was filed against them.

NINE PERISH AS THREE HOUSES IN MONTREAL BURN

Eight Are Children—Victims Are Overcome as They Attempt to Escape.

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 3.—Nine persons, eight of them small children, lost their lives early today when fire swept through three dwellings in two different sections of the city.

In each case, the flames spread so rapidly that the victims were trapped in their beds or were overcome as they attempted to flee.

Six of the dead, of whom five were children, perished in two houses in St. Eagathe Lane. Three other persons were rescued with difficulty and were removed to the Montreal General Hospital, suffering from serious burns and injuries. A score of others, members of several families, escaped from the flames into the bitter cold and were cared for by neighbors.

The fire, the origin of which is undetermined, spread with such rapidity that victims were found lying on the floors or collapsed on tables and chairs. All the families in the dwellings were asleep when the flames broke out and were apparently overcome before they could find safety.

The second fire occurred almost at the same time in Montreal north, where two girls and a boy perished in their beds when flames swept a small dwelling, owned by A. L. Taylor. The children were alone in the house while their parents were visiting friends. Two of the children were guests in the Taylor home, their mother being a visitor in the city.

The dead are Rene Thouin, 12 years old; Romeo Thouin, 3; Cecile Thouin, 9; Emelinne Thouin, 6; Lionel Brault, 9, and a woman and three children whose names have not been ascertained by the police.

HAWKINS, LACKING BOND, SPENDS THE NIGHT IN JAIL

Former Head of Mortgage Company, Held at Dayton, Issues Statement.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, O., Jan. 3.—Morton S. Hawkins, president of the Hawkins Mortgage Co. of Indiana, today is making an effort to obtain bond of $20,000, set last night by United States Commissioner Lidings, following his surrender to Federal officers here. Hawkins is held as a fugitive from justice for the United States District Court of Indiana.

Hawkins, who spent last night in jail, issued a statement declaring he surrendered "because of threatened interests of extensive stockholders in various financial institutions in which he was interested, it being necessary that he personally attend to the protection of these investments."

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 3.—Legal proceedings to determine the ownership of 51 per cent of the stock of the Welfare Loan Society, Inc., of Louisville, may result from the arrest of Morton Hawkins, at Dayton, O., in connection with alleged fraudulent use of the mails in Indiana, the Times says today.

A controlling interest in the Welfare Loan Society's stock passed in the hands of Hawkins and his associates about two years ago, the newspaper learns from F. P. Slyh, manager. The tangle which resulted from the Federal investigation of the mail fraud case has left ownership of the Hawkins shares in doubt. Slyh was reported to have said.

The Louisville concern has operated independently of the Welfare Loan Society of Indiana and of the Hawkins Mortgage Co. since last July. Efforts to recover stock held by Hawkins will be followed by reincorporation as an independent firm, the Times understands.

says, was on May 12 at the station at Theresa and Washington, which, subsequently, he robbed three times. The initial attempt was unsuccessful, as the manager thought he was joking and took away his revolver. The revolver was returned when he agreed it was all a joke.

In the early robberies, Roloff often used a taxicab. In one of the later ones, he says he used an automobile truck, belonging to his stepfather, Barney Williams of 610 North Vandeventer avenue. Roloff is also known to the police as George Williams and George Kernegie.

Roloff had not worked since losing his job at an electrical shop on May 10. At first he passed several worthless checks, for which he was lectured and paroled by Juvenile Judge Ossing. When he came before Judge Ossing again for the nine holdups, he was sentenced to 10 years at Boonville, but this was commuted to five years.

COL. BELL BLAMES SON FOR $100,000 ALIENATION SUIT

Fourth Wife of Christian P. Bell Charges Her Father-in-Law and His Sister Broke Up Home.

"I have entertained three of your wives, and I don't propose to entertain the fourth."

Thus wrote Nicholas M. Bell, veteran Democratic politician, to his son, Christian Peper Bell, when the latter, last October, sent word from Shreveport, La., that he was contemplating his fourth matrimonial venture.

"It's all a frameup," Col. Bell, the 82-year-old father, announced today, referring to the suit brought in Circuit Court yesterday by his son's fourth wife, Dayhne Doyle Bell, of Shreveport, for $100,000 damages for alleged alienation of affections, directed against the elder Bell and his sister, Mrs. Lucy M. Dietrichs, who reside at 4442 West Pine boulevard.

Son Back Home.

The son, who is 35 years old, and his bride, who is bringing the suit, were married Sept. 23 at Texarkana, Ark., and the suit charges, lived happily together, "enjoying the companionship of each other," until early in November when the father and aunt began efforts to estrange them. They are charged with wrongfully detaining the husband at the West Pine boulevard address, thus depriving the wife of his affection. In this connection, the father said today that the son's room had been kept open for him "for 20 years" and that he occupied it last night.

"He wants more money, and got his wife to file this suit," asserted the elder Bell, who related that the son a few years ago received $25,000 from the estate of his uncle, Frederick Peper, and also has coming to him $200,000 from the estate of his grandfather, Christian Peper, tobacco dealer. The latter inheritance is tied up in litigation. The present Mrs. Bell is employed in a downtown millinery establishment.

Much Marital Trouble.

Bell was divorced by his first wife in April, 1918, and was married five days later to his second wife, Hazel W. Bell, who divorced him two years later on the ground of excessive drinking. Four months later he married his third wife, Mrs. Hattie Geer Bell. In May, 1923, eight months after their marriage, he was sentenced to a year in the workhouse for failure to support her, but was paroled on his promise to pay her $40 a month.

The elder Bell was St. Louis' first Excise Commissioner and was twice a member of the general assembly in the '70s. He was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention in New York in 1868, and placed in nomination for President Horatio L. Seymour. He has been a visitor or delegate to nearly all Democratic national conventions since, including the New York convention of last summer, which nominated John W. Davis. During President Cleveland's first administration he held the post of Superintendent of Foreign Mails.

EXILED SENATORS OF RHODE ISLAND RETURN HOME

great bully." He hesitated, then blurted "but, gee, I miss the gang."

The filibuster of the Democrats was begun to force the Republicans to permit a redistricting of the Senate. The Constitution provides there shall be one State Senator from each city and town. The towns are all Republican in sentiment, the cities largely Democratic. The towns far outnumber the cities. The result has been that although Democratic strength has grown yearly in population, the Republicans have maintained a grip of steel on the Senate. In Rhode Island the Senate has immeasurable power.

Felix A. Toupin, a diminutive Frenchman of fiery temper, was elected Lieutenant Governor in the Democratic sweep which followed the textile strikes of 1922. He realized the power he could use. He believed even the Republicans don't dispute this—that the interests of the public demanded a distribution of Senators on the basis of population. A 10 weeks' filibuster of the minority Democrats in 1923 only crystallized his conviction.

When the 1924 session began the Democrats started a filibuster, led by Toupin, to force the Republicans to approve a bill for a redrafting of the Constitution by a convention. The Republicans refused to give in.

Gas Attack Is Made.

Republican efforts were stopped short by Toupin. Up to June 17 last only half a dozen insignificant bills were passed. The Democrats held up the annual appropriation bill and thousands of state employes were unpaid for months. Finally the banks advanced their salaries as a loan.

The State was at an explosive tension of excitement on June 19 at the end of a 52-hour session, which had started in a free for all fight. A cloth soaked with bromide gas was dropped in the Senate chamber. The Republican Senators asserted it was an attempt at their lives and refused to return to the chamber.

The Democrats said the Republicans put it there to kill Toupin and when it failed used it to gain sympathy for their cause. The arrest of the Republican Senators was ordered by Toupin. They fled from the State. They have not returned since except by ones and twos and then secretly.

Their return was quiet. But on Tuesday, when the new Republican Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Legislature is sworn in, they plun to return to the Statehouse in triumph. On Thursday a special "inaugural ball" given by the Republican club as a demonstration of victory to the exiled Senators, will be held at Rhodes-on-the-Pawtuxet. The State Senate, they believe, is safe for many years to come. The Democrats say that like the Dorr rebellion, the success of the filibuster will come through an aroused populace.

2-CENT GASOLINE TAX PAID BY MOTORISTS

State Levy for Better Roads to Yield $4,000,000 Yearly, Is Estimate.

Motorists this week are getting their introduction to the new 2-cent a gallon gasoline tax.

The State levy for road maintenance provided in Proposition No. 5, which carried by a substantial majority last November, went into effect throughout Missouri Thursday morning when filling stations opened for business and the earliest callers for motor fuel in St. Louis and vicinity found the price signs reading "16.9 cents" a gallon, where the night before they had read 14.9. Filling station operators say, however, there has been little complaint on the part of the public, most customers declaring their willingness to pay 2 cents more a gallon "if it will mean better roads."

$4,000,000 Annual Levy.

At many points in the State the 2 cents was added to a higher gallon price than that prevalent in St. Louis, rates in various sections varying according to the station's proximity to shipping facilities and distributors. At all stations, however, the increase incident to the inauguration of the new tax was uniform.

In a statement issued from Jefferson City last night, State Highway Engineer B. H. Piepmeier estimated that the money accruing from the tax will total $4,000,000 annually. This will mean about $2,000,000 more than is needed for road maintenance, which costs about $250 per mile per year. The surplus, however, together with the additional revenue from increased license fee for motor vehicles, will be added to the $25,000,000 of unsold bonds for the building of new roads.

A CHALLENGE TO PARENTS

Whatever the present critical juvenile crime wave means to the Court and the State there can be no doubt as to what it means to the parent

It is a direct, definite, inescapable challenge to the father and mother that they create and nourish a spiritual awakening in their offspring.

RELIGION and CRIME do not mix!

God's guidance will afford them treasures of wisdom and knowledge!

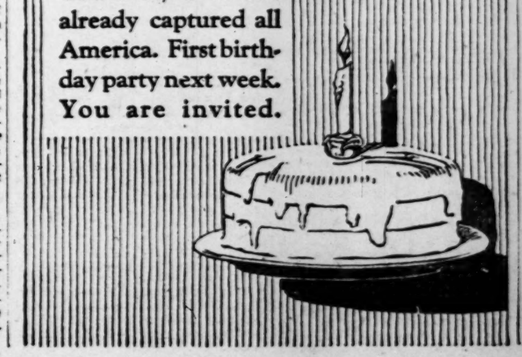

The sane, simple teachings of the church will refine them, enlarge and strengthen their human capacities, and lead them to a greater appreciation of all that is worthy!

Encourage them to take part in the acts of worship and each succeeding year will unfold a clearer understanding of order and reason, which are the dominant characteristics of a spiritual conception.

An ounce of RELIGION will perhaps save pounds of REGRETS!

MERCHANT SHOT BY THIEF; OTHER CRIMES REPORTED

Ruben Pass Critically Wounded by Negro Chased in Effort to Recover Stolen Coat.

THREE BURGLARIES DURING THE NIGHT

Boy Under Arrest Said to Admit the Theft of Two Autos — Woman Attacked in Home.

A storekeeper was shot and critically wounded in one of seven holdups last night by a negro defending the theft of an overcoat. In addition three burglaries were reported and a boy was arrested yesterday who is alleged to have admitted stealing two automobiles. The robbery and criminal attack on a woman in her home on Thursday night were reported yesterday and warrants issued for four men charged with that crime.

The wounded, storekeeper is Ruben Pass, 26 years old, of 1119 North Leonard avenue, who was shot at his clothing store at 117 North Jefferson avenue, at 8:45 p. m. A negro entered and took off a dyed army overcoat with a detachable plush collar, asking to see a gray overcoat. He tried on a secondhand garment valued at $25. Attention was distracted from him by the entrance of a negress seeking alterations in a skirt and he ran out the front door.

Negro Shoots Merchant.

Pass pursued him, closely followed by a clerk, Louis Seidel, while the wife and young child of Pass remained in the store. As Pass tried to seize the man, the latter drew a revolver, fired one shot and ran away, north in Jefferson avenue. Pass fell, the bullet having entered his abdomen and penetrating both stomach walls and part of his intestines.

The negro was described as about 22 years old, with several days' growth of beard. He wore a handkerchief around his neck. A number of suspects were arrested.

Negro Watchman Reports Robbery of Safe at Garage.

James Walker, negro watchman at a tank truck garage of the Texas Co., 4160 Olive street, reported that a white man held him up in the place at 5:30 a. m. today and took from the safe 19 envelopes, turned in by as many drivers, containing yesterday's collections. At the company offices it was said a check would be necessary to determine the amount taken.

It is the custom to have the last driver turning in twist the safe knob to lock it, but according to Walker's report that must not have been done properly last night. The robber, asking the watchman, "How's everything, Jim?" announced he wanted to look over the trucks but was told he could not, whereupon he drew a revolver and ordered Walker, "Open that safe or I'll kill you." Walker said he did not know how, but tried, and the door opened after a twirl of the knob. The robber seized the envelopes and left.

Knocked Down by Robber.

A robber held up Barnett Alpert and an assistant in Alpert's second-hand store at 1224 North Twelfth street last evening, taking $50 from the proprietor and $1.45 from the helper. Alpert tried to run out and the robber felled him with a blow of a revolver, then tore the telephone and light wires down in rage.

John J. Simmons of 4241-7 Page boulevard went to a house at 4268A Finney avenue last night to collect $40 rent, following finding of a note there earlier saying "Come for rent at 8 o'clock." He had just left the house when two negroes in an automobile held him up and took the rent money, $1.50 of his own, his watch and the revolver he was licensed to carry as a watchman.

Two of three men who had been riding in a Ford robbed Theodore Zahorsky of 4435 West Pine boulevard of his Buick car, at 8 p. m., after riding with him in Forest Park place from Euclid avenue to Boyle avenue. They also took $6.45 from Zahorsky and told him they "needed the car," but he would find it later. It has not been found.

Two Men Held Up on Street.

An hour later, two men of the same description, in a Buick, held up Joseph Simpkin of 5857 Page boulevard and Abbie Kurlander of 394 Skinker road, in front of 2635 Washington boulevard. They took $9 a watch, overcoat, muffler and purse from Simpkin and $8.50 a billfold and overcoat from Kurlander.

Two armed men took $57 from Thomas Acuff of 914 North Eighteenth street, in front of 1519 Franklin avenue.

Mrs. Mildred Goodrich was returning to her home at 1150 North Euclid avenue at 7:30 p. m., when a man in a Ford coupe across the street sounded the horn peculiarly, whereupon two other men ran out of her house, one of them knocking her down, and they all drove away. She found $7.60 and jewelry worth $100 had been taken.

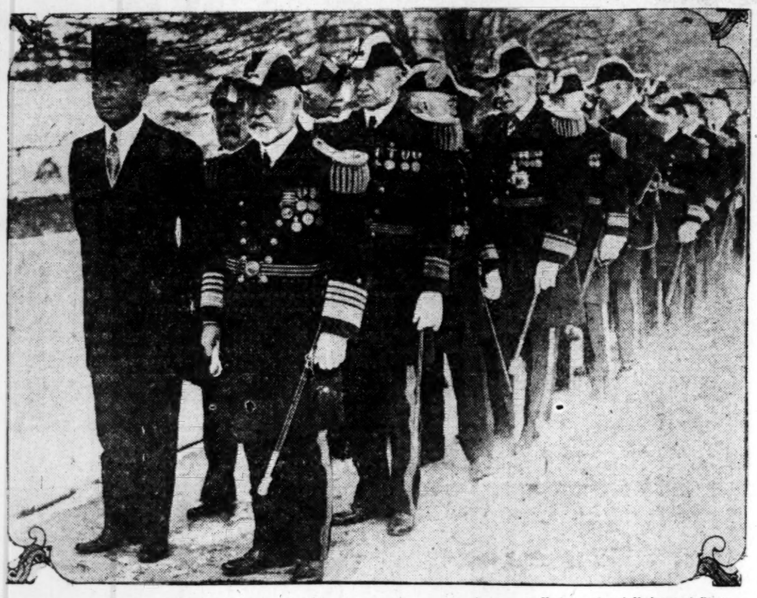

Other burglaries last night were: Home of Edgar P. Love, 5828 Deverville avenue, jewelry and clothing worth $1000; drug store of Justin F. Girardet, 1053 North Grand boulevard, cigars, cigarettes, perfume and other stock, valued at $400. Burglary on New Year's Eve of clothing and jewelry worth $450 belonging to Dr. Clinton O. Kleinschmidt, from his home at 4153 North Grand boulevard, was reported yesterday.

Detectives who visited a garage on Gravois avenue yesterday found a Ford chassis which, they reported, belonged to the car of Carl L. Kraus of 2317 South Thirteenth street, stolen Nov. 12. Following an inquiry, they arrested Charles Zimmer, 14 years old, at his home, 2265 Indiana avenue, in front of which was parked another car. They reported that young Zimmer confessed stealing both cars. The car at his home belongs to Hal McKay of De Soto, Mo., and was stolen here New Year's eve, they reported.

The boy declared he had sold the body of the Kraus car to a man, to get garage charges paid on the car, and then took the other car to have something to ride around in. The man denied knowledge of receiving stolen property, but a warrant charging him with that offense will be sought. Young Zimmer is held at the Children's Building.

Mrs. Florida Adams, 45, of 5924 Eatson avenue, called policemen to her home Thursday evening and reported that four men had robbed her there, after which one of them criminally attacked her, while two held her. The policemen found one man in her attic, whom she said attacked her, and later arrested three others. The police announced that she has identified all four and that warrants were issued charging all with robbery, one with a capital offense and the others as accessories to that. The men deny the charges. Mrs. Adams said the men inquired for a young woman, whom she told them did not live there, and then demanded $20. She said she had only a "few dimes" in the house, but they searched it, she said, and took $110.

KIEL CONFIRMS PLANS OF $1,000,000 WAREHOUSE

Famous-Barr to Build Seven-Story Depot at Spring Avenue and Market Street.

Announcement of plans for the construction of a seven-story warehouse, relay and shipping depot for the May Department Stores Co. (Famous-Barr) was confirmed today by Mayor Kiel, half owner of the Boaz-Kiel Construction Co., general contractors, who were issued the building permit yesterday.

The structure will be erected at Spring avenue and Market street, and will represent an investment of about $1,000,000. The Boaz-Kiel company will have charge of the concrete, steel and brick work, which will cost about $660,000.

The site is adjacent to railroad spurs, making possible direct loadings and unloadings. It is planned to relay city deliveries from the store to the new plant, there to assort and route them.

FORMER CONGRESSMAN DIES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Former Representative James W. Husted of Peekskill, N. Y., died of heart disease in a hospital here last night. He was 54 years old. Husted, a Republican, served in Congress from 1915 to 1923, from the Twenty-fifth New York District. He was president of the Peekskill National Bank and president of the Northeastern Pin Co.

Husted came here from Peekskill Monday to keep an appointment with a New York attorney. While in the attorney's office he suffered a heart attack and was taken to a hotel. His condition grew worse and Tuesday he was removed to the hospital.

OUSTED MAIL CLERK DENIES DISLOYALTY

T. E. Kaiser Appeals to Senator Spencer in Hope of Having Case Reconsidered.

The United Home Builders of America, now defunct in the greater wreck of the Hawkins Mortgage Co., has left more than one sad story in its wake. Theodore E. Kaiser, a railway mail clerk, of 3431A Utah street, who was discharged from the postal department yesterday after 23 years of service, may add his lot in great degree, although his financial loss was small, to the already long list of those who failed to survive the crash.

There is also the charge that he attacked the administration in conversation with other employes because of President Coolidge's veto of the postal employes wage increase bill. Kaiser was chairman of the Seventh District Legislative Committee of the Alle'l Postal Employes and had an active part in the campaign for higher salaries.

Cause of Dismissal.

Kaiser was discharged from the service on charges of "disloyalty and antagonism to the department." The first specification of the charge related to an affidavit he made last February, stating that he had inspected a financial statement of the United Home Builders and believed the concern to be in sound financial condition despite the receivership then pending and rumors of insolvency floating about.

This statement was included in the affidavit:

"I am also of the opinion that when the Postoffice Inspectors start out to break a company or business they can do it, regardless of the honesty or dishonesty of the company."

Kaiser, in his answer to the charge, denied he ever made such a statement and said that he signed the affidavit but did not dictate it. A reputable St. Louis attorney, in a letter to the department, however, said that Kaiser did make the statement and added that it made no great difference whether he had or not.

Statements as to Veto.

With respect to the other two charges growing out of the President's veto of the wage increase bill, he admitted having made them, but said he had done so privately and that at no time had he been guilty of public condemnation of the department.

He admitted that he had said the "word is being passed down the line of postal employes" to vote against President Coolidge for reelection, but said it was more or less in jest. He further recalled having suggested that a letter to the public be drafted pointing out that the veto of the salary increase bill was "a greater disappointment to the more than 1,000,000 dependents of postal employes than the World War." That suggestion was never carried through and was made to only two men. Both these statements were made after his affidavit was drawn.

The men who investigated his case are John Sparks and John Lorimer, inspectors in the Kansas City office.

Has Appealed to Spencer.

Kaiser has appealed to Senator Spencer to inquire into the case in the hope he will be able to have the department reconsider. He pointed out that shortly before he was discharged he had worked 116 hours out of 134 in substantiation of his claim of still retaining his loyalty to the service.

MISSING FATHER IS FOUND DEAD BY SON

Thayer, Ill., Family Waits in Vain for Expected Homecoming.

Christmas day, when no father came to the home of John Mohok at Thayer, Ill., his wife, Mary, and six children grew anxious. His gifts from the family lay unwrapped in a heap, and there was disappointment over gifts that he might have bought.

The family received a card from him saying that he had started for Thayer Dec. 18 from Johnson City, Ill., where he had gone to work in the mines.

Son Starts Search.

Then followed anxious days. The eldest son, John Jr., 22 years old, went to Johnson City, arriving there last Wednesday. He inquired of police, who informed him that the body of a man, said to be John Mohok, 42 years old, of Johnson City, had been held for the past nine days at East St. Louis, awaiting further identification. The son telegraphed East St. Louis police, asking that the body be held. Later the son identified the body as that of his father.

The son's telegram was timely, for it saved his father from a pauper's burial. The grave had been prepared and the body was ready to be removed to the potter's field when the message was received.

Died of Alcoholism.

On the night of Dec. 19, Mohok was found lying on the outside of a saloon in East St. Louis, police said. He was taken to jail and charged with being drunk. The next morning he was still in a delirious condition.

He was sent to St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, where he died on the third day after his arrest. A post-mortem was held and acute alcoholism given as the cause of death.

The body was shipped to Thayer yesterday for burial today.

INQUEST HOLDS COMPANIONS OF MAN FOUND DEAD IN STREET

Girl Is Among Four Persons Locked Up Without Bail.

The four companions of Andrew Wahoski, 45, 1216 Monroe street, who was found dying in the street gutter on Gravois near Blow street, about 4:30 o'clock New Year's morning, were held by the Coroner today, without bail, at the inquest into Wahoski's death. The inquest was continued to Monday, to permit the police homicide squad to make a further investigation.

Wahoski was found by Adolph Rubin of 5226 Neosho street, unconscious, and died at the city hospital at 1:30 p. m., New Year's day, of a fractured skull, fractured legs and internal injuries.

At the inquest today the Coroner placed on the stand Lawrence James, 27; Carl McAdams, 24; Robert Johnson, 23, all of 2847 Lafayette avenue, and Miss Frances Smith of 5711 Easton avenue. They testified they spent the evening in a saloon at 9201 South Broadway, where they met Wahoski. Later the girl testified, the party drove in an automobile to "some place on Gravois road," and that she overheard some conversation on the way about "the brother-in-law." Wahoski was a brother-in-law of McAdams. Upon the failure of any of the four persons to establish whether Wahoski was in the automobile party, the Coroner adjourned the inquest.

BELLEVILLE GROCER KIDNAPED, PUT OUT AT EAST ST. LOUIS

Three Youths Rob, Then Carry Off Manager of Kroger Store.

Three armed youths entered a Kroger grocery at 1501 West Main street, Belleville, about 6:30 p. m. yesterday, and at the point of revolvers forced the manager, O. F. Beck, to hand over the contents of the cash register, about $80.

Then they ordered Beck to follow them, marched him to their waiting Hudson sedan automobile and drove him to East St. Louis, where they put him out at Sixteenth and State streets. They did not take $30, which Beck said was his own, but in Belleville bought gasoline and made him pay for it, while a policeman stood across the street. Beck made his way to the East St. Louis police station and reported the robbery, adding that he lived at 13 South Thirteen street, Belleville.

Two young men held up Fred J. Niemeyer, manager of the Kroger store in Millstadt, near Belleville, at 6 o'clock last night, shortly after he had locked the store and started home. They forced him into a shed at the point of revolvers and took $50, the day's receipts, and his keys.

PINT ON TABLE, OWNER UNKNOWN, SO TWO GO FREE

First Case Resulting From New Year's Liquor Arrests Results in Dismissal.

"Insufficient evidence," meaning that the prohibition enforcement officers could get no one to admit ownership of liquor found on tables in hotels and cafes New Year's eve, already has brought about the release of two of the 25 revelers arrested that gay evening and may cause the cases against all others to be dropped.

What is regarded as a test took place yesterday afternoon in the office of United States Commissioner Atkins at the Federal Building. George Trampin, 3944 Hartford street, and Harold Wachter, 2612 Nebraska avenue, were charged on warrants with possession of liquor and were allowed immediate hearing before the commissioner.

An Ownerless Bottle.

Federal prohibition enforcement officers testified they visited Mission Inn, where Trampin and Wachter were making merry with a number of friends. A pint bottle of whisky was on the table and near enough to each of them to be readily grasped. But this was as far as the prohibition agents could go. They were not prepared to state that either of the accused actually owned the liquor.

Alderman Wilbur C. Schwartz, counsel for the defendants, told Commissioner Atkins that his clients would not take the stand, but that they refused to admit ownership of the evidence. Trampin and Wachter, he said, were with a party of 18 that night and were seated at one of three tables grouped together. Schwartz let the inference be clear that ownership of the pint was most indefinite.

Reports to Dyott.

Commissioner Atkins then ruled that on the showing made by the enforcement agents he was not justified in binding the defendants to the grand jury. He dismissed the case. It is understood the agents taking part in the New Year's eve activities told him the evidence against others of the 25 was similar to that against Trampin and Wachter.

W. C. Goshorn, acting group chief of Federal enforcement agents, who supervised the New Years enforcement, has mad his report to Special Assistant Attorney-General Dyott, but the conclusions reached have not been announced. Goshorn and his agents arrested 11 men at Hotel Jefferson, six at Hotel Claridge, six at Mission Inn, one at Washington Hotel and one at Bevo Mill. The procedure was to draw the celebrants aside, take their names and addresses and order them to report at Federal Building yesterday.

No Hip-Pocket Search.

The polite demeanor of the prohibition agents who visited the hotels was met with polite behavior on the part of the guests. There was no such disturbance as that which occurred at Hotel Chase two years ago when Gus Nations, then group chief, was met with a shower of crockery and shots were fired.

In most instances Goshorn only reprimanded those who had liquor on the table, and no attempt was made to search any celebrant or actually to place him under arrest. Thus the nature of the evidence gathered was of the liquor-on-the-table sort. Those who kept their flasks on the hip were not disturbed.

WARNS JOBS IN HIS OFFICE ARE NOT "SOFT SNAPS"

Secretary of State Becker Posts Rules Emphasizing Work as a Literal Requirement.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 3.—A set of working rules for employes of the Secretary of State's office that stresses work as a literal requirement, and warns against the theory that a political job should be a "soft snap," was posted in the department offices yesterday by Secretary of State Becker. "The office of the Secretary of State is not a soft snap, where you can draw a nice salary without giving much effort in return," reads rule No. 1. "Keep it in mind that it is a big business office required by law to serve millions of people."

"You are required, if you continue to hold your job, to give the State the same efficient service you would have to give your employer in private business," is rule No. 2.

One pointed injunction is "since the passage of the eighteenth amendment, all hitch racks have been removed and white mule and their riders are not tolerated on the premises." Among others are:

"The only place you can do your work successfully is at your desk.

"If you have any complaint to make stay away from the boss and tell it to the horse marines because there are no horse marines.

"There's enough trouble in the world without you starting any more.

"When you think you are smart enough to run the department in which you are employed keep your discovery to yourself and do enough work so that boss will find it out and give you a lift.

"This is no place for the gossip. The boss will do all the talking in the office and out of the office as to how the office is being run, or will be run.

"If you have so much private business or social duties to take care of that you cannot report for duty or stay on the job until quitting time take a permanent leave of absence and let someone work who wants to work and needs to work."

WITNESS IN MURDER CASE REPORTS BEING THREATENED

James Coughlin Arrested Following Failure to Appear Before Grand Jury.

James Coughlin, one of the chief witnesses in the murder of Max Biederman in a holdup of Biederman's hardware store at 1407 Franklin avenue, Nov. 24 last, was arrested yesterday and held for the Circuit Attorney, because he had failed to appear before the grand jury in the case on Dec. 9. He declared that he had been in hiding because five negroes had threatened him at various times, saying, "You'd better not identify anybody in that case or you'll be 'fixed'."

It was Coughlin who found Biederman unconscious in the store and identified two negro prisoners, who were held for homicide, as those who were at the store at the time. Coughlin, who was arrested at the entrance to Eads Bridge, said he had moved to 2928 Olive street to gain seclusion. He asserted that some of the threats were made in a restaurant at 1325 Franklin avenue and heard by the proprietor and two employes. These men were questioned and denied that they had heard Coughlin threatened.

DIES FROM FALL DOWN STAIRS

Mrs. Susan Kunz, 70 years old 1603 Wash street, died at city hospital last night from a fractured skull and other injuries suffered Dec. 6, at her home, when she fell while descending a flight of stairs.

MRS. IDA MILLER SENT BACK TO ASYLUM

She Had Been Held in Jail Since Death of Husband From Poisoning Dec. 4.

Testimony by her son and daughter at a hearing in Belleville yesterday resulted in the recommitment of Mrs. Ida Miller, of East St. Louis, to the Illinois State Hospital for the Insane at Alton after she had been held in jail for several weeks in connection with the death of her husband, John Miller, who died of poisoning on Dec. 4.

Judge W. R. Weber of the St. Clair County Court reached the decision sending her back to the asylum when her children, Ernest and Floy, declared she had acted irrationally since her discharge from the institution in August and had been abnormally interested in poisons and news relating to them.

Mrs. Miller, who is 46 years old, was first committed to the asylum last June as a sufferer from nervous attacks. Her discharge followed two months later when she exhibited evidence of an improved condition. At the time, however, hospital physicians said her cure was not complete and her return to the institution was advised after a hospital visitor had talked with her in her home, 1336 North Thirteenth street, in November.

Arrested After Husband's Death.

Her husband's death, under mysterious circumstances, followed a few weeks later. A Coroner's jury returned an open verdict to the effect that Miller died of an unknown poison administered by persons unknown, but Mrs. Miller was arrested for investigation two days later upon her return from the funeral. She steadfastly maintained she knew nothing of the cause of his death, but carried on conversations which indicated lack of mental control.

Testimony by members of her family revealed that she had threatened to murder her husband and their four children, had shown a morbid interest in poisons and their effects and had purchased and read a book on the history of crime and studied the newspaper accounts of recent Illinois poisoning cases, especially the Hight-Sweetin case. Relatives also described a mysterious bottle containing a yellow-colored fluid which she had kept for days before Miller was stricken and which was found empty after his death.

Testimony at Inquest.

At the inquest Miller's sister, Mrs. Sallie Phillips, declared Mrs. Miller seemed to fall into moods at intervals when she would have an impulse to kill someone, usually her husband or her daughter, Floy, who is 17. Mrs. E. C. Miller, mother of the slain man, also asserted his wife had threatened to kill him 18 years ago, declaring "I will kill him if I have to use powdered glass; that's slow but sure."

After being held for several days in the East St. Louis Police Station, the woman was transferred to the jail at Belleville where she has since remained.

Man, 65, Overcome by Gas.

Gilbert Hay, 65 years old, was found unconscious in the rear of his shoe repair shop at 3649 Easton avenue last night after neighbors, attracted by a strong odor of gas, had police break in the door. A gas stove in the room was turned on but not lighted. Hay was taken to city hospital.

RECLUSE OF OZARKS FOUND DEAD IN HUT

Former Ohio School Teacher Had Lived Alone on Farm After Quarrel With Wife.

By the Associated Press.

WILLOW SPRINGS, Mo., Jan. 3.—A story of how domestic troubles caused a man to bury himself as a recluse in the Ozarks and to live in poverty for a quarter of a century, was told by relatives of Christopher Arnold, 86 years old, whose lifeless body was found at his home a few days ago.

The man is believed to have been frozen to death because of his inability to purchase clothing and food and his refusal to accept help from neighbors.

More than 25 years ago Arnold came to the Ozarks. He purchased a small farm and has tried since to cultivate it. Year after year he seemed to grow smaller crops on the farm. His physical condition would not permit of much labor. However, he refused help, and would have little or nothing to do with his neighbors.

Quarreled With His Wife.

Immediately after his death his son, William Arnold, of Richmond, Ind., and his son-in-law, James Gettinger, of Union City, Ind., were notified, and came here to take charge of the body.

Forty-seven years ago Arnold, a school teacher in Ohio, and his wife separated. The couple had quarreled, following a quarrel between Arnold and his wife's father. He ordered his father-in-law to leave their home. When the man left, Mrs. Arnold accompanied him, taking their infant son, William, but left her husband their 3-year-old daughter.

Arnold took the little girl and left the home town. A few years later his wife obtained a divorce. Arnold returned, and, showing his respect for his former wife, deeded her his farm on the Indiana-Ohio State line. He also gave her all of their personal property and then set out to earn a living for himself and the little girl. He worked and educated the daughter.

Reticent About Self.

"We knew nothing of his poverty," the son-in-law told authorities here. "Father-in-law had written that he was comfortably situated and because of the poor health of my wife we never have been able to visit him."

Rather than face the marital troubles, the man sought solitude from other relatives, reared his daughter to womanhood, then buried himself in the wild section of Howell County. He was never talkative before neighbors, and when questioned he would refuse to talk about his own affairs. For several months he had been sleeping on a pile of straw in one corner of the little one-room shack in which he lived. The only furniture in the room was an old stove and the only food in the house was a quantity of corn meal.

The body was buried at Willow Springs residents there assisting the relatives in giving the man a respectable funeral.

BORAH AND COOLIDGE LIKELY TO CONFER ON DISARMAMENT

Senator Expresses Willingness to Formulate Resolution in Accord With President's Ideas.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The disarmament conference, which President Coolidge has been referring to as something for the more or less remote future, may be almost imminent. There was foreshadowed yesterday a conference between President Coolidge and Senator Borah, who yesterday announced his intention of introducing a resolution requesting the President to issue a call to the big navy nations to consider the reduction of naval strength beyond the battleship agreement that was framed at the Washington conference two years ago, and also to take up economic questions that the Senator deems vital to the cause of permanent peace.

It was stated that the President has not seen the resolution—as a matter of fact it has only been stated in general terms so far—but his appreciation of Senator Borah's comprehension of international relations made him sure that the Senator had given much study to the matter; and while the published summary seemed broader than he would approve, he was satisfied that after talking it over they would get together.

Senator Borah, when he learned of the President's views, indicated there would be no obstacle, so far as he was concerned, to the simpler agenda.

"I feel very sure we will have to come to the matters some time, but I would be delighted if my proposal seems too broad, to have a disarmament conference called, including the great naval Powers," Borah said.

Capt. Mathews gave her some money from his own pocket and ordered coal to be sent her. Patrolmen in his district are calling on the neighborhood grocers to obtain food for the family.

Miss Reeder is 21 years old and is employed as a saleswoman.

Officials in the pharmacal company denied today that their lotions contain any harmful ingredients.

Army Project Calls for 28 Weapons of 16-Inch Bore.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Modern coast defense guns outranging those of any existing battleship should be installed to protect American coast cities of great wealth and population, and at strategic points of our insular possessions, such as the Panama Canal and Hawaiian Islands, Brigadier-General Dennis E. Nolan, Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army, testified before the subcommittee which considered the War Department appropriation bill. The report on the hearing has just been made public.

"We know that fleets cannot successfully attack our coast defenses where there is anything like a parity of armament and to be safe the wise thing will be to outrange the guns on the ships," said Gen. Nolan.

Possibility of the use of long-range railway artillery in this connection, he added, is being given every consideration.

Maj. Robert W. Crawford, in charge of fortifications and construction in the office of chief engineers, explained to the committee that one big gun position, in the vicinity of Los Angeles, is to be used for a 14-inch railway gun of the latest model. He said the War Department desires to conduct firing tests against coast defense targets under war conditions to determine the feasibility of the gun's movement and its value as a coast defense weapon.

Defenses near Los Angeles, Maj. Crawford declared, are not sufficiently strong. The big railway gun and emplacement would automatically work into the defense of Los Angeles, he said.

Maj. Crawford said the army's big gun project called for 28 16-inch guns in the United States and insular possessions, of which 14 are to be in this country.

SPECULATIVE ENTHUSIASM AT HIGH PITCH

Volume of Trading on Stock Exchange in Short Session at Rate of 3,000,000 Shares for Full Day.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review today says:

"Speculative enthusiasm reached a high pitch in the short session, and the volume of trading was at the rate of over 3,000,000 shares for a full day's business. While industrial specialties again were a prominent feature, they were by no means the whole show. Some of them, notably Radio, made little further headway, but their places were quickly taken by other issues. Such standard stocks as New York Central, United States Steel and American Telephone showed pronounced strength, reaching new high records on the movement. Steel common sold above 123. Railroad issues took a more prominent part in the trading and some of the industrial groups, such as the oils, also revived. A large number of 1 and 2 point gains were recorded, and while profit-taking was sufficiently heavy to keep the general advance within fairly narrow bounds, there was no comfort in the market for the shorts. Whether the long talked of new year reaction comes soon or late, considerable hay is being eaten by the bulls meantime.

"Foreign exchanges continued buoyant, sterling reaching a new high since the war at $4.75¼, although it subsequently receded ¼ of a cent from this level. French francs were ½ a point higher at 5.42¼ cents and other European currencies moved up a point or so. Actual business transacted was small, and most of the European currencies were scarce.

"The weekly statement of the Federal Reserve Bank, published this morning, reflects a slackening in demand for credit and is entirely consistent with the case in call money over the week-end. Discounts, which had risen sharply in the previous week, owing to end of the year demands, declined $82,300,000, and only slight changes in open market purchases and holdings of Government securities brought a similar decrease in total earning assets. The latter, however, are now only about $21,000,000 below the total of a year ago. Note circulation decreased substantially and the reserve ratio rose from 70 per cent to 73 per cent.

"The statement of the New York Clearing House as of the close of business on Jan. 3, 1925, showed the following changes: Loans, discounts, investments, increased $30,381,000; net demand deposits increased $95,416,000, time deposits increased $4,986,000, circulation decreased $9000, and excess reserve decreased $28,471,000.

WHEAT SELLS HIGHER ON LOCAL MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Jan. 3.—Grain futures sold higher on the exchange today.

Report of improved export situation was the prime factor in the wheat market's upturn. Corn was helped by wheat.

There was some reaction in the general list late and corn lost all of the early gain and closed fractionally lower.

In the cash grain market Saturday soft wheat was in a better demand than Friday's, with market 1c higher; hard wheat steady. Corn was steady to 1c lower, with a fair demand, while oats were steady to ½c higher, also a fair demand.

After opening higher wheat futures gained fractionally in the early trade. Liverpool wheat closed 1⅛ to 1¼d lower. Corn here opened fractionally lower to fractionally higher and then showed general fractional gains.

Local wheat receipts, which were 118,300 bushels, compared with 88,400 a week ago and 28,600 last year, included 17 cars local and 74 through. Corn receipts which were 71,400 bushels, compared with 70,000 a week ago and 93,800 last year, included 38 cars local and 13 through. Oats receipts, which were 106,000 bushels, compared with 22,000 a week ago, and 38,000 last year, included 33 cars local and 20 through. Hay receipts were 18 cars local and 11 through.

Primary receipts of wheat were 468,000 bushels, compared with 628,000 a week ago and 327,000 last year, corn receipts were 1,262,000 bushels, compared with 989,000 a week ago and 656,000 last year, oats receipts were 797,000 bushels, compared with 728,000 a week ago and 311,000 last year. Wheat shipments were 765,000 bushels, compared with 655,000 a week ago and 399,000 last year, corn shipments were 382,000 bushels, compared with 398,000 a week ago and 532,000 last year, oats shipments were 320,000 bushels, compared with 398,000 a week ago and 453,000 last year.

WHEAT PRICES LOWER IN TRADE FOR THE WEEK

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Wheat bulls bent every effort to sustain prices today and closing values reported a victory in their favor. Results for the week, however, were more disastrous and rather sharp losses were posted despite today's advance. Corn and oats had a downward swing both today and throughout the week. Provisions developed weakness today and as a result material losses were recorded.

Throughout the week the action of wheat prices was erratic with bulls trying their utmost to prevent further desertion. More active competition on the part of southern hemisphere growers made many of the leading holders dispose of their lines and take a different view of the situation. Prices the last day or two showed some recuperative power, but despite the rallies losses of ⅝c to 3¼c were recorded for the week. The buying has been based on increased sales abroad. The market today was a see-saw affair. The local bulls, however, absorbed these offerings and at the close prices were up ⅝c to 1c. There was considerable talk of further export business but the amount finally confirmed was 120,000 bu. winter wheat by Baltimore exporters. A better tone was noted in the cables from abroad, although containing no direct business, a local exporter stated. He expressed the belief that a 5-cent break may result in considerable activity in export circles. Based on last night's closing prices, Argentine values were 1¼c higher than those of gulf winter.

A weak cash situation has been the depressing factor in corn throughout the week. At the close today prices were ⅜c to 1¼c lower than yesterday and 3 to 3¼c lower than last Saturday. The country is selling no corn to arrive on the decline. Cash corn discounts were 1c to 2c wider for the off grades today despite the decline in futures. This emphasizes the slowness of the demand.

Oats were off ⅛c to ⅜c today. Monday's visible supply statement showing 71,000,000 bu. at terminal markets was staggering. This was a handicap which bulls believed too big to surmount.

Bearish sentiment was predominant in provisions today as a result of the liberal increase shown in lard stocks after the close yesterday. At the close lard was 22½ to 30c lower and ribs 10c lower than yesterday.

Changes for the week showed lard 35c to 65c lower, ribs $1.15 to $1.22½ lower while bellies were nominally 37½c to 50c lower.

COTTON CLOSES HIGHER AFTER EARLY DECLINE

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The selling movement which developed in the cotton market yesterday continued in today's early trading. After opening barely steady at an advance of 4 points to a decline of 7 points, active months showed net losses of 17 to 23 points at the end of the first hour.

Reports of declines in the market for Egyptian and East Indian cotton seemed to stimulate the selling here. Southern hedging as well as further commission house liquidation also was reported on the decline to 23.26c for March and 24.25c for July.

Small spot sales in the Liverpool market commented upon by early sellers here, but private cables reported a good undertone in the Liverpool futures market on spinners buying and covering.

The early decline was checked by trade buying and the market later rallied on over the week-end covering promoted by bullish spot advices. March sold up to 24.14c and July to 24.58c. The market closed very steady at net advances of 12 to 18 points.

Bond Market Review

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Under the leadership of oil company and certain rail issues, bond prices continued to make good headway in today's trading. New high records were established by Skelly Oil 6½s and Pan-American Petroleum 6s on gains of better than a point in reflection of the improved outlook in the oil industry. Substantial advances also were recorded by a variety of low and medium priced rail liens, including Chicago and Alton 3½s, St. Paul 4½s of 1932, Rock Island refunding 4s and Katy adjustment 5s. The recovery of French obligations continued, with a half dozen issues bettering last night's closing levels. Offering of a $30,000,000 Federal land bank issue 4½ per cent bonds is expected next Monday.

EXPECTED $12,333, SAYS SHE GOT BUT $50

Divorced Wife of East St. Louis Caterer Sues for Third of His Wealth.

When Mrs. Marie Terss obtained a divorce from Charles Terss, one of the owners of the Thesieres Catering Co., East St. Louis, she understood she was to get a third of the $37,000 at which the business is valued. She did not get it and she feels Terss added affront to injury by going to Greece and marrying another woman and bringing her to East St. Louis to live. She filed suit yesterday in the East St. Louis City Court for what she claims is due her.

Mrs. Terss is 30 years old. She was married to Terss, 48, in December, 1916, after six months as cashier of his restaurant at Milwaukee. They separated last March and Mrs. Terss obtained a divorce on the grounds of cruelty, May 3. She says Terss had promised to give her, in cash, one-third of the value of his property. He paid her $50 and was to pay the remainder when he sold his property, but has paid no more, although she has executed deeds to facilitate disposal of the property, and she alleges that Terss has sequestered his holdings to prevent her getting anything.

Mrs. Terss thinks Terss was planning his second marriage beforec she divorced him, for always he was getting letters from Greece which Mrs. Terss now thinks were from the other woman. This woman had been the sweetheart of Terss' brother, John, Mrs. Terss says, before John came over in 1916. She thinks Terss could never have seen her because he came to America when he was 15 years old. But on John's recommendation, she says, Charles sent her an engagement ring which was bought by John. Then Charles went to Greece and after a while a letter came announcing that he had been married. He returned and brought his new wife with him.

John yesterday said his brother could not be seen for a statement. Speaking for his brother, he said Charles had made a visit to Greece to see his mother and while there met the girl whom he brought back as his wife, Dec. 22. He said his brother owned only a few shares of stock in the company and was not wealthy. He declined to discuss the business transactions mentioned in the suit.

COMMON U. S.-BRITISH PEACE POLICY URGED BY CECIL

Alliance to Impose Peace Might Be Dangerous, Because Misunderstood, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—England and the United States must work together for the peace of the world, Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, winner of the $25,000 peace award of the Woodrow Wilson foundation, told the Pilgrims of the United States at a dinner last night at the Plaza Hotel.

An Anglo-American alliance to impose peace upon the rest of the world, however, "might be dangerous and dubious," Viscount Cecil in his speech warned, because "the rest of the world might not understand the altruism of our motives." He urged a common peace policy with the free exercise of the joint influence of both nations.

Viscount Cecil said that President Coolidge, with whom he conferred in Washington yesterday, had expressed gratification at the friendly relations existing between the two countries. This meant a great deal, he said, "because in England we trust President Coolidge implicitly."

Chauncey M. Depew, president of the Pilgrims, in introducing Viscount Cecil, said in part:

"The English-speaking peoples of the world understand each other better and have become centuries nearer each other during the last two decades. Our meetings were peculiarly thrilling when we met to welcome the mission which came to us during the great war and afterwards to the almost only one successful conference, the one which met in Washington to decide the questions of the Pacific and disarmament. But tonight is the only time when we meet to celebrate simply peace."

Did Teasing Cause This Killing?

Did this Georgia man's jilted sweetheart actually try to wean away his wife in revenge or was she merely teasing him when she dropped hints of his wife being out on gay parties at road houses? Read the story in the Sunday Post-Dispatch True Life Stories Section.

HANGING OF SLAYER OF LIEUT. SEARS SET FOR FEB. 13

Attorney for Negro Will Appeal on Grounds of Judge's Comments to Jury.

Circuit Judge Ittner yesterday formally sentenced William Lashley, negro, to be hanged on Feb. 13 for the murder of Police Lieut. Sidney Sears, who was shot to death on June 22, last, at Fourteenth and Papin streets.

The sentence was entered to facilitate the appeal which will be filed by Ben T. Hardin, attorney for Lashley, who was convicted of the murder on Oct. 31. Hardin announced the appeal would be based on allegations of unwarranted comment on the evidence by the trial Judge and failure of the Judge to instruct the jury on all the law in the case and on lower degrees of homicide.

2-CENT GASOLINE TAX PAID BY MOTORISTS

State Levy for Better Roads to Yield $4,000,000 Yearly, Is Estimate.

Motorists this week are getting their introduction to the new 2-cent a gallon gasoline tax.

The State levy for road maintenance provided in Proposition No. 5, which carried by a substantial majority last November, went into effect throughout Missouri Thursday morning when filling stations opened for business and the earliest callers for motor fuel in St. Louis and vicinity found the price signs reading "16.9 cents" a gallon, where the night before they had read 14.9. Filling station operators say, however, there has been little complaint on the part of the public, most customers declaring their willingness to pay 2 cents more a gallon "if it will mean better roads."

$4,000,000 Annual Levy.

At many points in the State the 2 cents was added to a higher sale price than that prevalent in St. Louis, rates in various sections varying according to the station's proximity to shipping facilities and distributors. At all stations, however, the increase incident to the inauguration of the new tax was uniform.

In a statement issued from Jefferson City last night, State Highway Engineer B. H. Piepmeier estimated that the money accruing from the tax will total $4,000,000 annually. This will mean about $2,000,000 more than is needed for road maintenance, which costs about $250 per mile per year. The surplus, however, together with the additional revenue from increased license fee for motor vehicles, will be added to the $35,000,000 of unsold bonds for the building of new roads.

Chinese Bandits Rob 5 Americans.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The military Governor has placed military guards on trains and taken steps to apprehend four or more armed Chinese in the uniforms of the Feng-tien army, who held up and robbed passengers aboard a Pekin-Tientsin train near Tientsin, Dec. 30, the State Department was advised yesterday by Clarence E. Gauss, American Consul-General in Tientsin. Five Americans, B. Rocklin, Alfred Weitzer, Lieuts. Gallagher and Lehr of the United States Army, and Mrs. Lehr, were included in the foreign passengers robbed on the train, the dispatch said.

A CHALLENGE TO PARENTS

Whatever the present critical juvenile crime wave means to the Court and the State there can be no doubt as to what it means to the parent

It is a direct, definite, inescapable challenge to the father and mother that they create and nourish a spiritual awakening in their offspring.

RELIGION and CRIME do not mix!

God's guidance will afford them treasures of wisdom and knowledge!

The sane, simple teachings of the church will refine them, enlarge and strengthen their human capacities, and lead them to a greater appreciation of all that is worthy!

Encourage them to take part in the acts of worship and each succeeding year will unfold a clearer understanding of order and reason, which are the dominant characteristics of a spiritual conception.

An ounce of RELIGION will perhaps save pounds of REGRETS!

MARTIN.—The George Junior Republic was founded by William R. George in the summer of 1895. It is located at Freeville, Tompkins, County, N. Y., nine miles from Ithaca, on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. Its object is to prevent crime; to develop character and to promote good citizenship. Its principle of work is: Love and labor, self-support and self-government. The republic is now an all-the-year-round home for children, founded on the belief (1) That a boy or girl may break a law, or commit an offense, and still not be necessarily what is known as "bad" or "criminal." (2) That as a rule a boy or girl who commits an offense against social or civic laws is possessed of many of the qualities, such as courage, leadership, self-reliance, which will, if rightly directed, make the strongest character and the best citizens. And that to direct and develop these qualities and to instill the sense of responsibility, honor, self-respect and the respect of the rights of others, or in a word to make a citizen, requires more than arbitrary authority. (3) That to separate a child who has broken the law, or who is criminally inclined, or an unmanageable child, from the normal environments of educational, commercial, social, civic, religious and home conditions and commit him at the impressionable age for a definite period to an institution where he is thrown in constant contact with the hardened criminal, where he is restrained by rigid discipline from acting upon his own initiative, and where his individuality is lost in numbers, will never prepare him for the problems and responsibilities of life and citizenship which will confront him upon his release from that institution. (4) But that to develop a sense of responsibility the child must have responsibility placed upon it; to overcome pauperism in the child it must learn self-support, and to respect law and order the child must practice self-government. The George Junior Republic is international, nonsectarian and is for boys and girls over 14. The property consists of 350 acres of land, 10 cottages, church, school house, jail building (boys' and girls'), printing shop, plumbing shop, carpenter and furniture shop, bakery, steam laundry building, farm buildings, hospital buildings and general store. Boys and girls become "citizens" upon their arrival at the George Junior Republic. The first business of a "citizen" after being released from quarantine is to find employment, either on the farm or in one of the shops or cottages. The "citizens" are paid for their labor in a currency equivalent in value to United States money. Each "citizen" works five hours a day and attends school five hours a day, the republic school curriculum including a college preparatory course. A boarding place in one of the cottages is next arranged for, according to the amount a "citizen" is able to pay from his or her earnings. In addition to their board, each "citizen" must pay a poll tax and buy their clothes. All necessities and some luxuries can be purchased at the republic store. The next important step for the "citizen" is to become familiar with the laws which govern the George Junior Republic. All laws are made by the citizens and passed upon at the monthly town meetings. The laws are enforced by officers elected by the "citizens" from among themselves. The government officers consist of a president, vice president, secretary of state, secretary of the treasury, girls' judge, boys' judge (these officers comprising the president's cabinet); a girl district attorney, a boy district attorney, police officers, prison keepers and a board of health department. The religious, educational home, civic and commercial training furnished at the George Junior Republic develops in its "citizens" the sense of responsibility, respectability, industry and all that is highest and best in manhood and womanhood, and fits its "citizens" to become useful, creditable citizens of the larger republic. It costs the State of New York between $630 and $700 annually to support each convict. It costs between $250 and $300 annually for each "citizen" at the George Junior Republic. The republic is practically supported through voluntary contributions.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

A Job for the City.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN view of the fact that more snow and ice may be expected this season, I think it timely to say something about the ordinance requiring the removal of snow and ice from sidewalks. During this severe spell attention was frequently called to this and people made frantic efforts to comply. Wherever they did, I walked in the street in order to get a foothold. In order, however, to be in line with law-abiding citizens, I also attempted to scrape ice from my walk. Then I tried boiling water, and, of course, result was more and smoother ice than before—just as on the adjoining walks. Then I scraped with one of those new long-handled instruments invented for that purpose. Finally after being exhausted and having no more time, I gave up. Later I put out ashes where people had to walk. Today I saw several owners working for hours thinking that the higher temperature would make work possible. Result: Uneven, slippery sidewalks except where sun reached. Why ask the impossible of people? We can put out ashes, but we can't remove ice at all times.

I would like to make a suggestion: The city could take care of the removal of snow and ice just as is being done in many European cities. This would provide work for the unemployed. When it is impossible to remove ice it would be officially known and sand or ashes hauled and strewn.

Heat in Street Cars.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ALL of your editorials are well written, as was the recent one concerning the heat in St. Louis street cars. Only one criticism is to be offered and that is that you did not print the Missouri law in reference to the duty of a common carrier of passengers to keep its patrons comfortable. We are interested in that law. The writer for one would like to be a witness in a test case, where, for instance, some passenger on a St. Louis car sues for damages for bad colds, pneumonia or any other malady lurking in these Toonerville trolleys of the "g-r-r-r-r-eat metropolis."

This writer is from Atlanta, Ga.—a famous spot in the "sunny Southland" where they have a little cold weather, albeit all the cars are electrically heated. If they were not, there'd be a howl that would mean something. The Atlantans just simply wouldn't stand for it, if they put these stoves in their street cars.

During the recent cold snap while riding a Manchester car the writer noticed a slovenly, ill-kempt conductor who was too lazy to close the rear doors. He left a crack about an inch wide through which the wind whistled. Persons in the rear of the car meekly bore it. Literal jelly-fish.

If the Missouri statutes give the public no redress from that sort of stuff, oh, well, that's different, but in that case why not advertise to the world that it's all the old bunk about a person "from Missouri" having to be shown, and change the word "shown" to "shorn," as it would be more fitting.

AN ERSTWHILE NEWSPAPER REPORTER FROM GEORGIA.

A Contractor's Warning.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

BEING a contractor of 24 years' experience in St. Louis, I have been reading the Forbes trial as published in your valuable paper. The practice of grafting has become common in the building industry. Not only is the Government fleeced, but the states, counties and municipalities. And that is not all; grafters that know nothing about building are abroad in the land, fleecing private parties, here in St. Louis as well as elsewhere. So this is a fair warning to the public to deal only with reputable builders. This might save many dollars for the home builders.

A CONTRACTOR.

As to Downtown Parking.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch

THERE is considerable talk in regard to the city putting a stop to the parking of automobiles in the downtown district. There does not seem to be any real good reason for discontinuing parking as the city outlines, as there is no great congestion anywhere in the downtown district. The citizens of St. Louis, I am sure, would like to get the views of the Post-Dispatch on this question. The Post-Dispatch is the only recourse that the people have to help them out in such matters.

POPE STANBERRY.

THE KAISER DISMISSAL.

The summary dismissal of Theodore E. Kaiser, for 25 years an employe of the Railway Mail Service, on a charge of "disloyaly and antagonism" comes at an unfortunate time in view of the fight in the Senate over the postal salary increase bill and the hullabaloo raised over the payment of money to a secretary of the Senate Finance Committee to do certain work in connection with the bill.

It seems from the evidence that Kaiser acted indiscreetly and foolishly in criticising the postoffice inspectors in connection with their action against the United Home Builders, and in criticising President Coolidge's veto to his associates. But these were merely indiscreet acts, which might possibly be charged against quite a number of the postal employes. No question of his efficiency as a railway mail clerk has been suggested. His loyalty to the service ought to be tested by his actual work, not by his statements with regard to the postoffice inspectors or the President's veto. The veto was condemned by many newspapers, and doubtless millions of people; certainly by an overwhelming majority of Congress.

Kaiser, however, was Chairman of the Seventh District Legislative Committee of the Allied Postal Employes, and was active in the campaign for higher pay for postal employes, which was opposed by the administration. What part did this activity in opposition to the administration play in his summary dismissal? Coming at this time, it takes on the color of an effort to whip the postal employes into submission to the administration's will in regard to their salaries. It will be taken undoubtedly as a warning that the governmental employes must cease activities to better their conditions of labor or their wages when the administration opposes.

If the administration is to bind and gag Federal employes and compel submission without protest or petition to any conditions that may be imposed upon them; if the government is to control the personal opinion of employes, it will have to search for human insects to fill Federal jobs.

THE CHEAP SKATES OF PALM BEACH.

Announcement is made that Palm Beach is to have a million-dollar church. Philistia probably will jeeringly mumble "cheap skates." Philistia is right.

The souls that foregather at Palm Beach are strictly precious souls. They are the dernier cri of spiritual smartness. They are elegant. To use an old-fashioned word which polite usage has dropped, they are genteel.

Doubtless an occasional roughneck butts into the circle, but, generally speaking, the Palm-Beach-combers are our crowned colony. Such shining and bejeweled souls, we insist, should worship in the swellest edifice money can produce. Anything less than that would lack "the pearls and paros and symmetric gold to set their 'devotionals' in a worthy frame." It is all right, of course, for an ordinary plebeian soul to commune with divinity under whatever meager auspices chance provides. But when a Palm-Beacherino, or Palm-Peacherino, condescends to converse with the Deity the occasion calls for splendor.

A million-dollar church for Palm Beach strikes us as penurious. A billion-dollar declaration of faith should proclaim the glory of the Lord down there where turquoise sea hums golden chanteys to emerald shore.

PRINCES AND REPUBLICS.

Louisa May Alcott, commenting in "Little Women" on a certain irrepressible infatuation of the sons and daughters of American democracy for Kings, Princes, Lords and Ladies, cites as an illustration the furore of "a few years ago" when the Prince of Wales, who was to reign as Edward VII, came a-visiting. Albeit there was no Long Island society to speak of when the first Prince of Wales came, there was much the same excitement among the ladies, and something of the same among the men.

Nowhere, in truth, does royalty so much appeal as in the nations where royalty is not tolerated. Just now the women of Argentina are rushing the Paris dress houses and collecting all the finery they can afford—for the Prince of Wales is going to that republic, too.

When the Grand Duchess Cyril was leaving she said in a mysterious manner that she had been delighted with her visit and had "learned more than you know." Does she mean that she learned that we are not as devoted to republican institutions as we think? If such was her thought, she has misinterpreted. No doubt Miss Alcott explained the fascination of royalty when she ascribed it to tradition reaching far back to the days when our forebears fell upon their knees when the King rode by.

ART IN BUSINESS.

The wreckers have been at work, the last few days, on the Odd Fellows' building tower, up over Olive street just east of Ninth. Until obscured by the taller Arcade building beside it, the Odd Fellows' tower was a noticeable bit of architecture downtown. It gave a dignified, almost churchly, aspect to the sedate red brick building.

Building reconstruction downtown, in the last decade or two, has seemed to be a process of removal of the original and artistic features of business edifices, and their replacement with bare, dead-level patterns. The St. Nicholas Hotel, with its charming exterior, was made over into the unadorned right angles of the Victoria building. The Century building, pride of the business community in the '90s, was pared down from picturesque rough stone buttresses to flat surfaces, and its palatial interior hall and stairway were cut to a narrow entrance passage. The Central National building was similarly robbed of fine interior and exterior features. The Mercantile Club, probably the most individual of downtown structures, was done over into a plain office building. The one-time Holland building lost its graceful cupola. Happily, no one has yet chopped up the domed entrance of the Security building into shop space.

The biggest of downtown buildings erected in the period of these changes is notable chiefly for its bigness. Other buildings have shown more of the artistic—the Arcade, Hotel Statler, the Post-Dispatch, the City Club, the Federal Reserve Bank and the Town Club. There is promise, from its plans, that the new Bell Telephone building will be worth looking at for other reasons than its mere size. So art may not perish in the business district.

Henry Ford has bought the old Concord coach, in its day another rattling good vehicle.

THE TOWN CLUB'S ACHIEVEMENT.

On a raw, biting day a year ago "Jack" picked up his table and chairs and dragged them through the principal thoroughfares into the new City Club building. Today "Jill" comes "tumbling after" into the resplendent new Town Club home.

Naturally the community, including the brotherhood of "Jack," congratulates, admires, admits everything. It admits that there has been no babble of tongues or counsel in the erection of the new building. It admits that women must be good business managers to put through such a project without an assessment, assuming that this happy condition is permanent. As to the interior glories of the new home its curiosity is piqued, very definitely suspecting that woman's personal interest, her taste and home-making skill, have outdone or added to the achievements of the professional decorators in the men's clubs.

Seriously the Town Club has been generally recognized from its incipiency as a center of culture and comfort, the heart and home of employed womanhood, a civic force and social agency quite indispensable to the city. With a new home of its own all that the Town Club has meant will be crystallized, intensified and advanced. Personal credit for the achievement the Post-Dispatch will leave to the membership itself to assess. It appears to the outsider that no such success could have been attained without every member pulling for the cause

OUTBURST OF HATE.

I hate the athletic girl.

You'll find her perpetually arrayed in a pair of outlandish knickers and a sweater that will make the ancient Grecian god who was supposed to paint rainbows appear like a third-rate sign painter.

She is forever cooking up strenuous games and hikes and such, and will gaily sally forth with a dozen or so of others such as she.

The court jester of old, in all his humorous glory, was never arrayed as one of these.

A giggling, squealing, boisterous, joking gang. They will board the street car, and like a bunch of boys of school age, they will jostle, push and crowd and LAUGH for no reason whatsoever but that the making of a lot of noise may perhaps attract the attention of the passengers, which it never fails to do. And they (the passengers) will glance up from their crossword puzzles, and observe the goings-on with admiration and perhaps smile to their seat-mates and say that the gals of today have their grandmas skinned a mile. They'll alight at last, will the gals, with greater clamor than ever, for the making of a lot of noise, it seems, is the first law of a good time.

They'll grab another car going out into the sticks, on which the same performance is repeated as before.

At last they'll get off in a perfect fit of ecstasy and grabbing each others' hands will form a line and gaily skip down the street or road or whatever it happens to be.

Into nature's great domain, the great outdoors, and all day long they'll of course be on the go. Tramping, climbing hills and fences and chasing bulls. And tearing down trees in order to procure artistic twigs and such, which are lugged home and placed in fardinieres. If they play games (as of course they will, 'specially if spectators be around), they'll act oh, so masculine and rough in the true Fairbanksian style and go through more motions than a whirlwind in order to do something that requires the mere outstretch of an arm. And each trying with all her might to outcomboy Tomboy Taylor (herself). And all the while the noise must go on with ever increasing power.

At the end of day they'll drag their weary footsteps home, and each one really sorry that she had gone at all.

When a movie date were ever so much better, or perhaps a motor ride with some omnyo Valentino with a none too certain chin.

There's your athletic girl; three-fourths of them are not as athletic as they pretend to be. But knickers really are so adorable, as is the rest of the athletic paraphernalia. And it's so smart in these days to act so boyish and wild.

I hate the athletic girl.

BEFORE DAWN.

Of all thy star-songs
Ringing from thy throat
And falling faint to earth in echo,
Thy lonely silences
Alone, I note!

Of all God's beauties
There is none to tell
The vivid ecstacy thy dark
Damaskene silences
Can speak so well!

TRIOLET.

There grows a lonely, broad-armed tree
Beside a lonely, narrow way;
And though it now is far from me,
There grows a lonely, broad-armed tree
Where I have been—oh, forever see
Beauty's self bedim the day.
There grows a lonely, broad-armed tree
Beside a lonely, narrow way.

HOWARD FRANCIS SEELY.

Through the hours of the night the man and his wife had taken turns in watching by the bedside. For twenty-one nights this had continued. She was their baby, their all. A nurse was out of the question. The doctor would wait for his pay, but medicines took a heavy toll of his $35 per week and they meant cash. The man took the watch from 2 to 5. At 5:30 his work-day began and Mary, the wife, must hold the long day vigil.

At the car barn he made the fire in his car while his motorman tested brakes and sand and gong. "How's little Mary, Jim?" "She fell asleep before I left, Bill, but she's weak—awful weak." "The missus and I'll run over tonight." "That's good of you, Bill; but Mary wants her Ma or me by her all the time." "The rail's sweaty this morning. Glad they tightened these brakes when I told 'em." "Watch my bells today. This weather has slacked the rope a heap." Another shovel of coke. The early air is chill and factory girls don't dress too warm.

The first transfer point. "Watch your step, please. (I wonder if Mary's still asleep?) "All aboard." Not much trouble with this crowd. The girls are laughing and joking and jostling. The men ask for the same transfers morning after morning. Now and then one tries to slip by the fare box, not often. Another crowd. "Inside, please." A coat-tail caught in the door. "What you tryin' to do? Hit me with that door?" "Excuse me; I was just trying to get it shut before the car starts." "Yes'm; transfer at Grand." "I don't want two tokens." "All right; here's 7 cents. (God! I hope poor Mary dont fall asleep and forget the 7 o'clock medicine.)" "What's the matter with this car; no fire in it? I should think the U. R. would spend a cent on coal.' "Fire's been going since 5:30, but the air's raw." "Huh!"

Another conductor: "H'lo, Jim! Got your turkey bought yet?" "Not this year, Alf." (Wasn't little Mary happy the year we went back home for Thanksgiving?) "Can't give you that transfer, ma'am. Nearest connecting line only." "Well, that's funny; all the other conductors do. I'll take your badge number and report you." "I'm sorry, ma'am; those are the rules. (I hope she don't get mad and get me in a jam with the boss. I sure can't afford no suspension.)" The last crowd for this trip. "Move forward, please. (Why will they jam the back end when the front's empty? Oh God! spare our baby!)" A dash through the crowd to fix the smoking stove. From Bill: "We're three minutes late, but I'll make it up on the trip back if these d——d coal trucks give me a chance. Take it easy, Jim; you look white. Had any breakfast?" "No; I'll grab a cup of Java at the end 'lesen we're behind time." And so through the eight hours. A dash for home.

"How is she? What'd the Doc say?" "He says there's still a chance. She's been asking for you, Jim." "Thank God! You lay down, hon. Here's daddy, baby." The street car conductor's day was done and begun again.

The MIRROR OF PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

THE MISSOURI PENITENTIARY.

From the Kansas City Times.

MISSOURI has only one State prison. It is the largest institution of its kind in the country. Several more populous states have more than one prison each. In some states prisoners are classified and there are different institutions for the respective classes. There should be such classification in Missouri, as urged especially by Herbert S. Hadley when he was Governor. The lesser offenders, more especially when they also are young offenders, should be segregated from the more hardened criminals. This can be done and has been done to some extent in the penitentiary at Jefferson City, but the result is not nearly as satisfactory as when the classes are kept in different prisons. There is no prospect of early classification of prisoners in Missouri. Meantime, the State penitentiary is an institution of tremendous importance not only as a prison, but also as an industrial plant. There have been periods when it has been very unsatisfactorily handled. There was much improvement under the Gardner and Hyde administrations. The incumbent director and warden have resigned. It is understood these resignations have been in response to a policy of the incoming Governor to have few subordinates except of his own initial choosing. That, of course, is Mr. Baker's business and it will be the hope of every friend of Missouri that the changes he shall make will be for the better. It is particularly important, however, that the State prison should be under the management of a director and warden particularly well qualified for their duties and responsibilities. Prison management is difficult, even in smaller institutions. Much progress has been made in recent years in the handling of prisoners by men of particular fitness and long training. The best available man should be put in charge of the Missouri penitentiary.

BOSSES AND BOSSING.

From the Baltimore Evening Sun.

THE proper study of mankind is of one who has authority. The final test of character is the right to boss somebody. When a man of exceptional ability is given authority over his fellows he feels no astonishment. He accepts leadership as a matter of course and his head does not swell. He does not become a tyrant. But when an inferior man or a man of an inferior class is given authority over his betters almost invariably he becomes overbearing and arrogant. The explanation is not far to seek. He is conscious of his inferiority to those who are required to obey him. The knowledge that he is inferior fills him with a bitterness that demands punishment of those who dare to be superior. Moreover, his inferiority complex insists that he establish by means of playacting the degree of importance necessary to soothe his wounded vanity. He wears gorgeous raiment; he struts; he swears great oaths; he hurls explosive adjectives at those about him. He does not do these things because superior men do them, for superior men do not. He does them because they enable him for a moment to feel as important as superior men seem. In the chaste language of today, he kids himself.

JUDGE OLSON SEEKS IMMUNITY

Offers to Reveal Reasons for Suspicions If Released From Liability.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—A final opportunity to present any other information he may have regarding the death of William McClintock, "millionaire orphan," will be given Tuesday to Harry Olson, Chief Justice of the Municipal Court, who instigated an inquiry into the death, found by chemists and physicians to have resulted from typhoid.

Judge Olson has offered to consider whether he would reveal reasons for the investigation if released from liability by Mrs. Shepherd and William D. Shepherd, chief beneficiary and foster father of McClintock, who died at the Shepherd home, while his fiancee, Miss Isabella Pope, waited with a license to marry him.

Shepherd declared his name had been "besmearched by the repetition of vile insinuations and innuendoes" and that "the public and I are entitled to know the animus and malice that re behind all this."

When chemists and physician examined the exhumed body of McClintock they decided that the young man's death was due to typhoid fever complicated by a secondary internal intestinal hemorrhage.

Shepherd, who with his wife, the boy's guardian, raised young McClintock and inherited his fortune, accepted the findings as a complete vindication of any suspicions the authorities have attached to him, and in a statement, indicated that he expected to bring legal action against those he believes responsible for the investigation.

NEW YORK DRY LAW PLANNED

Republicans to Back Measure to Replace Mullen-Gage Act.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Enactment of a State prohibition enforcement act to fill the place of the Mullen-Gage law, repealed in a previous administration of Gov. Smith, will be sought by the Republicans, who will control both branches of the new Legislature, which will meet soon.

The main points of the program were settled last night at a conference between Lieutenant-Governor Seymour Lowman and George K. Morris, chairman of the Republican State Committee. After the meeting Morris left for New York to meet United States Senator Wadsworth.

GIFT OF PLAYGROUND TO CITY BY MRS. WOOD AUTHORIZED

Will Directs That Sum Not in Excess of $35,000 Be Spent for Site.

Purchase of a public playground as a gift to St. Louis, as directed in the will of the late Mrs. Minnie Wood, widow of Henry Wood, wealthy dairy owner and banker, was authorized by the Probate Court Wednesday.

Mrs. Wood's will, under which practically the entire Wood estate was divided among local charitable organizations, directed that a sum not in excess of $35,000 be spent for a playground site, as a gift to the city. G. A. Buder, executor of the will, explained in Probate Court that he had chosen a five and one-half acre site at Broadway and Gasconade street, for which a purchase price of $27,000 had been agreed upon. Buder said he had selected the site after examining more than 50 other locations, and believed it the best situated for the purpose. Authority for the purchase was then granted.

The city will come into full possession of the property as soon as details incident to the making and recording of the deed can be completed. The tract has a frontage of 697 feet on Broadway, and has long been used by the children of the neighborhood as an athletic field.

WOMAN LEAVES $90,000 TO CLASSMATES OF 25 YEARS AGO

Daughter of Late John P. Wilson of Chicago in Will Gives One $50,000, Another $25,000.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Three of her classmates at Smith College 25 years ago were remembered in the will of Miss Martha Wilson, daughter of the late John P. Wilson, attorney and political leader. The will, disposing of an estate estimated at nearly $1,000,000, has not been filed.

After leaving $400,000 to the Children's Memorial Hospital, Miss Wilson provided for bequests of $50,000 to Mrs. Isabella B. Bunker of La Grange, Ill.; $25,000 to Elizabeth Preston of Chicago and $15,000 to Rebecca K. Monroe of Montclair, N. J., her former classmates.

The remainder of the estate goes chiefly to her brother, John P. Wilson of Chicago, and sister, Mrs. Anna K. Dickinson of Santa Barbara, Cal., with bequests to employes.

PASSENGER AGENT RETIRES

Fred J. Deicke of Frisco Lines Quits After 45 Years of Service.

Fred J. Deicke retired as division passenger agent of the Frisco Railway here yesterday, because of impaired health, after 45 years' service with the road. He began as a messenger boy in the land department in 1879, when the eastern end of the road was being built, and four years before the now abandoned tunnel at Meramec Highlands was constructed. As Meramec River outing resorts increased in popularity and numbers, one of them on the Frisco was named for him, Deicke.

Successive positions held by Deicke, all in the passenger department, were clerk, traveling passenger agent, city passenger and ticket agent, general agent and division agent, the last since 1918. Deicke resides at 4124A McPherson avenue. He is succeeded by E. J. Baker, who has represented the Frisco at Chicago.

FLOODED THAMES IS THREE MILES WIDE

Storm in Great Britain Breaks Records—Hundreds of Chimneys Fall in Gale.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World. 6

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Heavy gales, with almost unprecedented rains and snow in the north, continue to sweep the whole of Britain and floods are increasing.

Hundreds of square miles are under water and the Weather Bureau forecasts more storms today from the Atlantic. South Devon had two inches of rain in 12 hours. Never in the memory of anyone living have such high winds been experienced in London, and in Glasgow the gale reached a velocity of 70 miles an hour.

Waves on the Thames scattered sprays across the embankment, and at Folkestone a ton truck, loaded with meat, was blown 50 feet into the harbor. When it was lifted out, the driver was found dead, still clutching the steering wheel, with his foot on the brakes. A double-decked street car was blown off the rails and wrecked.

A blizzard is reported in Glasgow, and in Bath the lower Avon River has flooded the entire lower town. All the rivers in the Thames country have overflowed their banks, but the most spectacular danger, which may mean trouble for London if the storm continues, is the Thames. Dispatches from correspondents in the Thames Valley tell of perilous motor journeys through constantly rising water during what one writer calls "a day of terror."

From Cotswold Hills, an elevated tract in Gloucester County, separating the Thames and Severn Basins, it is reported the river has broken its banks and wanders over the countryside for 40 miles, a half mile to three miles in width.

The great inland sea thus created was lashed to fury yesterday by a 50-mile wind and if further heavy rain falls the situation may become worse, but how much worse nobody knows because the worst floods of record already have been eclipsed. From the terrace of Windsor Castle the entire countryside, as far as the eye can reach, is a huge expanse of water.

In London itself the worst damage was done to chimney pots and windows. From the tower of Westminster Cathedral during the gale, chimneys could be seen falling by the hundreds, while with glasses tall factory chimneys could be seen to sway perilously. Danger of the Thames overflowing its banks into London, which has never happened since the modern city grew up and weirs were built upstream to avoid flood danger, exists, but experts think it unlikely unless the present storms continue two or three days more.

But the moat at Hampton Court Palace, dry for generations, is filled with river water. The historic Island of Runnymede, where King John signed the Magna Charta, has disappeared. Riverside village, in Chertsey Parish, Surrey County, is isolated by water, and hundreds of bungalows and cottages are flooded.

Seas everywhere around Britain are tumultuous and many ships have called for assistance, but no serious wrecks have been reported. Cross channel services are suspended.

Sixty-Mile Gale Paralyzes French Shipping, Ports Flooded.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—The gale which swept Paris and Northern France yesterday continued in the night, the velocity of the wind reaching 100 kilometers (about 62 miles) an hour.

Boats from Havre for Caen, Trouville and Honfleur were unable to sail and all fishing boats were forced to port.

In Cherbourg lower quarters were flooded, due to the heavy rains. No ships sailed from Brest, while Molene island and the lighthouses were cut off, the island's inhabitants lacking food. Concarneau was similarly stricken.

Reports from Lorien say the steamboat Saturn broke in two and sank. At Larochelle, a smack went down after striking a rock, and a sloop was crushed by two heavier sailing vessels. Boulogne reports the cross channel packet Edmond Labories stranded, but refloated with the aid of tugs.

A wireless distress call was received at Marseilles from the steamer Dahomey, 20 miles south of Penmarch, on the Brittany coast, asking for a tug. Of the 14 telephone lines between Paris and London, only three are functioning and all the lines connecting Paris, Brussels and Mayence are damaged. The national meteorological office believes the storm will continue today and probably into the night.

SAYS U. S. ALONE IS GETTING 'SOLID BENEFIT' OUT OF WAR

Soviet Foreign Minister Asserts America's Economic Pressure on Europe Increases Daily.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—"The United States is the only nation that is getting real solid and durable benefit out of the World War," Georges Tchitcherin, the soviet Foreign Minister, said to the Petit Parisien's Moscow correspondent in answer to a question regarding the present relation to the United States to Europe.

"America's economic pressure on the European states," Tchitcherin continued, "is augmenting day by day. Such a situation of inequality must, on the whole, be considered unhealthy. It must be added that recently the American Government has profited by its international strength, under the direction of Secretary of State Hughes, to act in the sense of aggressive imperialism, and in the Far East has presented a menace to China's independence."

WHOLE EDITION OF ITALIAN NEWSPAPER IS SUPPRESSED

Account of Raid on Office of Florence Journal So Violent Issue Is Seized.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Jan. 3.—The Italian political situation is still most acute owing to the continued police searches of the houses of subversives and the recent seizure of certain opposition newspapers.

The Cabinet has forbidden all Fascist meetings, including one which was to have been held here Sunday, and has also dispatched a general inspector of police to Florence for an immediate and thorough investigation of Wednesday's incidents which led to the invasion of the offices of the Nuevo Giornale.

The opposition press at first stated that the damage to the Nuevo Giornale offices was so serious that the newspaper would be unable to appear for several weeks. The journal, however, went to press, but contained such a violent account of the raid on its plant that the entire edition was seized.

LOUIS KAPLAN STOPS DANNY KRAMER AND WINS FEATHERWEIGHT TITLE

Russian-Born Fighter Takes a Sound Beating Before Gaining Victory

Seconds Throw in Towel as Signal of Surrender After Kaplan, Starting Vicious Attack in Sixth Round, Has Kramer Helpless in the Ninth.

By Ed Van Every.
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Louis Kaplan, a sturdy Russian-born youth, who has lived the most of his life in Meriden, Conn., is the world's fistic featherweight champion. If there is any who will question his right to the title they were not among the spectators in Madison Square Garden last night, who witnessed the convincing fashion in which Kaplan beat Danny Kraemer of Philadelphia into submission in nine rounds of hectic battling.

Kaplan was just a little human buzz saw last night and at the finish Kramer tottered around and when the towel came sailing into the ring from his corner Danny looked like he had been monkeying with the wrong end of the machinery.

There have been few fights seen in the historic old temple of fistiania, or anywhere else for that matter, where two men maintained such a terrific pace for the distance. There was hardly an instant's let up from the first to the final round.

Championship Bout.

Right from the start the affair had a championship aspect. The ovation accorded Kaplan upon his introduction was tremendous but not surprising in view of the fact that a delegation close to 1400 of his home town admirers were on hand. There was a strong delegation from Philadelphia to cheer for Kramer and they certainly made their presence known. Kramer was the first appear and he took his corner very cool and confident. Kaplan, on the contrary, was a bundle of nervous energy. He came running down the aisle to the ring with eager little steps and fairly threw himself over the ropes into his corner. There he pranced about on his toes with jerky little motions, unable to keep himself at ease.

With the bell he shot for his opponent like an electrically charged being and met Kramer only a few paces from his chair with a left and right to the head. Kramer, not in the least phased by this charge, drove in a heavy left to the ribs. Kramer is what is known as a south-paw boxer; he fights with the right hand forward and crosses his left with telling force. He is regarded as one of the heaviest hitters with his left among the little fellows. The ease with which Kramer found the body with this left right from the start boded ill for Kaplan. It did not seem possible for anyone to survive many of the pile-driving smashes to the midsection. But Kaplan proved that his little body is rawhide and his persistent energy something beyond human limit.

Another Terry McGovern.

Before the finish of the stirring conflict his demoniac attack in its eagerness brought back memories of the fighting spirit of another great little featherweight champion, Terry McGovern, while the fashion in which he assimilated punishing blows without a sign of effect made him seem a smaller edition of Battling Nelson in his durability.

Kaplan repaid Kramer's first perfectly measured smash to the ribs with a left swing to the head and followed quickly by lashing a left and right to the face. Again and again Kramer met this ceaseless attack with his powerful left to the body, but still Kaplan came charging in and firing away with both hands. At close quarters as they battled with one arm free Louis bounded up on his toes like a little maddened bull and jolted the back of his gloved hand to the chin of his foe. The first round belonged to Kaplan on aggressiveness more than effective punching.

Kaplan started off in the second with another tornado of swings, but was driven back with a fearful left upper cut to the heart. Louis took several more nasty smashes to the body and then came back with a wild charge and got over a left to the head that jarred Danny back on his heels. The Meriden boy was now going at a killing pace and he flashed over a left swing that sent Kramer over to the floor; it was partly a slip and Danny was right up again. Kaplan was bleeding from the left eye and Kramer from a gash high up on his forehead.

A Real Battle.

The house was in an uproar and as the spectators settled back in their chairs for the third session many were wondering how long the pair could keep up this breath-taking pace. Kaplan was just as eager as ever in his aggressiveness but Kramer was scoring more frequently than ever with his left to the body and held his man even in the round.

Kramer nailed his foe right at the start of the fourth with one of his heaviest left drives to the body and although Kaplan lashed back with unflagging persistence he seemed to slow up a trifle. Danny impaled him with no less than four successive left uppercuts to the stomach as Louis came touring in and though the tide of battle was now going strongly in Kramer's favor, Kaplan came back desperately each time and flashed over a left and right to the head that sent Danny back on his heels.

The fifth, which was Kramer's best, found Louis taking another bad body beating and it seemed the Philly boxer's attack was beginning to tell. Kaplan took a bad left upper cut to the chin in this round and near the end of the round was caught by three heavy left smashes to the wind followed by a staggering left swing to the ear.

Kaplan Comes Back.

And then in the sixth Kaplan surprised by rushing out from his corner as full of fight as ever. He showered punches about Kramer's head with both hands so fast Danny was fairly swept from his feet. He finally got his left to the body working but Louis came back with a whirlwind charge that was faster than anything he had let out yet.

Faster than ever came Kaplan in the seventh, which spelled the beginning of the end. Louis was shooting his puncher now almost faster than eye could note. He was driving Danny back under his wild onslaught, and when the Philadelphian did essay to stand off his foe his head was sent bobbing from side to side under the blinding fire of punches.

With the bell for the eighth Kaplan sprang for his man with a tigerish leap and sent a left to the jaw that almost dropped him. Danny's head was now a target for a hail of punches like shots from a rapid fire gun. This was a terrible three minutes for Kramer. He was hardly able to keep his feet and his eye was a fearful sight. As he made for his corner his legs almost buckled under him.

Bout Ends in Ninth.

Kramer came up in bad shape in the ninth and a cyclone of punches soon had him bleeding from various parts of the head and gasping for breath. He seemed about to topple from exhaustion when the towel signalizing his defeat was tossed into the ring. The round had lasted one minute and 11 seconds.

Last night's affair was the third and final round of an elimination tournament under the jurisdiction of the New York Boxing Commission to determine the successor to the title vacated by Johnny Dundee. During the tourney Kaplan, previous to stopping Kramer, had outpointed Bobby Garcia and knocked out Jose Lombardo. In each of three contests Kaplan had made the featherweight limit and proved decisively that he is strong at the weight. Louis weighed in at exactly 126 pounds yesterday afternoon, one pound more than Kramer, and he never looked stronger or faster. It is doubtful whether Johnny Dundee, or any one of the featherweight title contenders could have lived through 15 rounds of fighting such as Kaplan unleashed last night.

Last Night's Fights.

LAKEWORTH, Fla. — Jimmy Lewis, White Plains, N. Y. shaded Frankie Moran, New Orleans, in a 10-round bout. They are featherweights.

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—Ray Neuman, former Jersey City light heavyweight, gave Vic Alexander of Mexicali a severe lacing in 10 rounds. The bout was the first here under the new law legalizing boxing matches in California.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Jack Silver, leading San Francisco lightweight won the decision over Johnny Reisler of New York in a six-round bout.

NEW YORK—Louis "Kid" Kaplan of Meriden, Conn., scored a technical knockout over Danny Kramer of Philadelphia in the final bout of a tournament for the featherweight championship.

Babe Herman of California knocked out Billy DeFoe of St. Paul, Minn., in the eighth round of a scheduled 12-round match. DeFoe was badly beaten before the knockout. DeFoe weighed 126, Herman 124½. The knockout punch came after one minute and 49 seconds of fighting in the eighth round.

LOREN MURCHISON AND PADDOCK POSTPONE WORLD TOUR START

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — Loren Murchison of Newark, N. J., and Charlie Paddock of Los Angeles, American sprinters, who were scheduled to begin a world tour Jan. 14, have delayed the start of their exhibition until the middle of February, Murchison announced yesterday.

The tour will start either Feb. 14 or 24.

Murchison's decision to postpone the beginning of the trip, it is said, is based on his desire to meet Jackson V. Scholz, the only American to win a first place in the 1924 Olympic sprinting events, on the indoor boards during the January meetings.

Seaview Rex Is Winner of Trial

Pointer Dog Now Considered a Likely Contender for National Honors.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GRAND JUNCTION, Tenn., Jan. 3.—Seaview Rex, the pointer dog belonging to Dr. O. D. Sidney of Atlantic City, N. J., won the championship of the Associated Amateur Field Trial Association which was decided here yesterday. The win gives Seaview Rex the title of amateur champion, his owner a leg on the $1000 cup and a $500 chest of silver which is won outright.

Never was the big Atlantic City pointer in better condition than he was yesterday. Never did he handle his game so well or go so wide or so fast. He won his title on sheer merit, romping through the two hours, which is the length of all the heats in this stake, and finishing as fresh as when he began. The going was rather heavy owing to the frosts and rains, but this did not affect the dog in the least. He was indifferent alike to the muddy fields and the heavy cover which abounds on practically all the courses.

The stake brought out 10 dogs, all of which had previously qualified by winning a place in some amateur trial held by a member of the national organization. Some of the best amateur dogs of the country were present and never in the history of the stake has such a high class one been run. On the form that Seaview Rex displayed he looks like a very fitting candidate for the national championship which will take place here the third week in January and if he can run three hours as well as he did the two he will undoubtedly be a dangerous competitor for the greatest honor the field trial world has to bestow.

Seaview Rex ran his heat in the morning and was down with the setter, Dr. John Cromwell, owned and handled by Scott Studson of Atlanta, Ga. The Atlanta dog is himself a noted winner but on this occasion his light was dimmed by the magnificent performance of the Eastern dog. The nearest competitor to Seaview Rex was the pointer Lilian Gale, owned by Dr. J. S. Brown of Montclair, N. J. She ran a good race, found game in abundance but lacked the class of the winner.

ENTRIES FOR $100,000 FUTURITY CLOSE TODAY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — Nominations for two of the great fixtures of the racing world in the United States will close today at the offices of the Westchester Racing Association. These are for the Futurity, to be run at the autumn meeting at Belmont Park in 1927, and the Matron Stakes, to be run at the autumn meeting of 1926.

The Futurity is for 2-year-olds and it is estimated that the race to be run in 1927 will have a value of $100,000. The race that year will be at seven furlongs, instead of six as in the past.

The Matron Stakes, which was inaugurated at Morris Park in 1892, is for fillies 2 years old in 1926. The added money is $50,000 and the race is at six furlongs over the main course at Belmont Park.

CUBS TO ERECT TABLET IN HONOR OF CHANCE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—The memorial to Frank Chance, late manager of the Chicago White Sox, to be erected in the Cubs' park, will be a tablet, President Veeck of the Cubs said last night, after completing examination of all designs submitted.

The memorial to Chance, who gained baseball fame as the Peerless leader during the years he managed the Cubs, will be a tribute from the management of the Cubs.

It will be similar to the memorial in the Cincinnati park in honor of Frank Bancroft, who served as secretary to the Reds for years.

Dr. Westerman Outlines Diet For the Boxer in Training

Medical Examiner for Western A. A. U. Boxing Board Gives Advice on "What to Eat" During Period of Physical Preparation.

This is the fourth of a series of articles written by officials in charge of amateur boxing in this district in which an endeavor is made to better acquaint boxers and spectators with the rules and to assist boxers in the matter of training.

By DR. C. M. WESTERMAN,
Member of the Registration Committee of the Western A. A. U. and Medical Examiner of the Amateur Boxing Commission.

In discussing the training of boxers, I will confine myself to the question of diet.

There are two phases of training, the early, building-up period and the drying-out stage.

In the first, it is essential that the athlete put his stomach in good shape, not by the use of medicines but by natural exercise and the proper foods. He should drink copious quantites of water. He should drink two or three quarts of water a day. If he likes buttermilk he should drink a quart or two, cutting down on water accordingly.

The reason for this excessive consumption of water is that in his daily work he will perspire a great deal. He should perspire. It is very desirable for sweating provides a means of getting rid of burned-up muscle tissue. He is cleaning out his body. Water also serves as a slight laxative.

He should eat fruit, cooked or raw. Vegetables, with their supply of proteins, are very beneficial. A boxer in training should be almost a strict vegetarian. That means that he should cut down on his meat diet, and under no circumstances should he eat fried meats. He should also keep eggs off his bill of fare.

If an athlete is taking plenty of water into his system, he will not go "stale" at the critical period of drying out.

Going "stale" means that he can't get up a sweat. When an athlete goes "stale" he can put in an hour or two of fast, vigorous work and at the end his skin will be dry and hot. The reason is that he did not diet properly in the preliminary stages of training. He has not enough water in histsystem.

Water and a healthy skin will eliminate the poisons which make boxers "stale." Thus, the steam room is serviceable not alone in taking off weight but in loosening the pores of the skin so that the body can "breathe" through the skin.

Prunes, stewed figs, apple sauce, oatmeal, turnips, spinach, water cress, beans, peas, celery and like vegetables and fruits are valuable for their food properties and for their laxative properties.

Should Eat Candy.

An athlete in the early stages of training should eat three meals a day and he should eat a little sweet stuff between meals. There is nothing builds up the muscle cells that have been destroyed in raining as carbohydrates do. That is why soldiers and sailors in the training camps craved sweetmeats. Candy is full of carbohydrates and as such is good food for a boxer in training.

And then, in coming to the process of reducing to the required weight, the diet must be altered. All starchy foods must be eliminated. Bread, potatoes, pastries, corn and similar starch-bearing foods must be stricken from the menu.

Green vegetables, cooked, and the fruits mentioned above are still very desirable.

Water and foods containing water should be taken very sparingly.

To drink much water at this stage would be harmful because it would result almost immediately in putting on weight and then the task of reducing would become very much harder.

Dry bread or toast, rice, a good pudding, baked apple, peaches and grapes are good foods which will provide energy without greatly increasing the weight. Even ice cream in a reasonable amount is all right, but bananas are harmful.

Of course, it is understood that coffee, tea, smoking, chewing and the use of alcoholic beverages are to be avoided.

In outlining this course of diet for the man in training I have spoken in general terms. It is quite possible that the rules will not apply in every case. The best-trained boxer is the man who best understands his own system and knows what he can eat and what he must forego In a majority of cases, the program here given will prove thoroughly satisfactory and helpful.

(The next article of this series will be on instructions given to boxers by the referee and will be written by Harry S. Sharpe.)

CINCINNATI, Jan. 3.—The 1925 National League baseball season will open here on Tuesday, April 14, with the St. Louis Cardinals scheduled to play the Reds.

This gives two excellent plums for the first two clubs invading Cincinnati; the Cardinals have the opening day, while the second club — presumably Pittsburg—will have the first Saturday and Sunday of the 1925 season.

Notre Dame's Stand in Fourth Period Saved Game, Rockne Says

Most Thrilling Incident of Struggle, Coach Declares—Team as Much "All In" as Physically Possible and a Stanford Touchdown Might Have Been Disastrous.

By Knute Rockne.
Notre Dame Football Coach.

(Copyright, 1925.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 3.—The most thrilling incident of that game of thrills at Pasadena New Year's day was the stand the Notre Dame team made on their own one-yard line in the fourth quarter. Our team was as much "all in" as it was physically possible when that stand was made. If Stanford had been able to put across the touchdown, there is no telling what might have developed thereafter.

Notre Dame showed then and there that it had the fight, because a team that lacked fight would never have been able to withstand the powerful attack that Stanford was throwing against it.

Many questions have been put to me about the relative strength of Stanford and other teams we have played in the regular season. The only team that I can compare Stanford with, as regards general style and strength of attack and defense, is Army. The Stanford line was a powerful one, and outcharged us as statistics show. The Shipkeys, tackle and end, are wonderful players. Harry, the tackle, is every bit as good as Ed Weir of Nebraska, and most of the all-American pickers seem to have realized how good the cornhusker is.

Stanford made many gains through one of our tackles after Joe Bach went out with two ribs broken. Bach was not the only man who was badly hurt. Bill Cerney also had a rib cracked, while Harry Stuhldreher had a small bone broken in his foot on the second play of the game and played through until it was nearly over. His injured foot kept him from moving about much to start forward passes, as is his custom, and our offensive in that respect was limited.

Stanford's quick charge through our line halted the back field to some extent, and the effect of the climate helped, too. All of our players but Crowley were visibly affected by it. Don Miller wasn't able to untrack himself at all. Nevertheless I'd like to repeat the experiment at some future date, if Notre Dame is able to turn out another team that can complete its regular season undefeated. We learned some things from this trip that will be valuable for a future event of the kind.

Nothing would please us more than to meet Stanford, especially in the middle west, if such a game is possible.

Ernie Nevers, the Stanford backfield star, is as fine a fullback as we've seen in a long time. At this moment, Wyckoff of Georgia Tech is the only player I can recall who is much of the same general style as Nevers.

The passing attack that Stanford Launched against us was not intricate, but it was well drilled, and no passing attack is much good if it is intricate, because the chances for deceiving the offense are just as great as they are of fooling the defense.

I fail to subscribe to the opinion voiced by Coach Lou Young of Pennsylvania that the post-season intersectional game, bringing a team from the East or the Middle West into this territory is too much of a task. I would say that I'd hesitate to bring a team that wasn't well up in all departments, because the time has passed when Pacific Coast football is to be taken lightly.

They play just as good a game here as they do any place in the country. The players are big and husky, and they are as fast as the average. In coaches like Glenn Warner and Andy Smith they have men who compare favorably with the best in any other section of the country. They have had enough success in these intersectionals, particularly in the recent games, to drive home the feeling that the Coast need not stand in awe of any invaders. And that feeling will make victories over the Coast defenders doubly hard in future times. However, as I have mentioned before, I want another chance to bring a Notre Dame team to California, and I would like to have Stanford be the Coast champions again, and be asked to represent their territory against us.

Rockne Asks Warner To Bring Team East For a Game in 1925

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 3. KNUTE ROCKNE, coach of Notre Dame football team which defeated Stanford University, 27 to 10, at Pasadena New Year's day, has extended an invitation to Coach Glenn Warner to bring his Cardinal eleven East next year for a game with Notre Dame in the new Chicago stadium.

Rockne pointed out that no California team had ever met an Eastern eleven on an Eastern field, and that coaches and fans alike were eager to witness such an encounter.

Coach Warner displayed no enthusiasm over the bid, however. He explained there was small chance of Stanford sending a team East in the middle of a semester, and that if the contest were put off until the Christmas holidays it doubtless would be frozen out by winter weather.

ROCKNE DECLINES TO PLAY CALIFORNIA U.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3. — The four horsemen of Notre Dame were riding along in the path of the California Missions today from Los Angeles to San Francisco, a bit battered and bruised as the result of the rough ride given in defeating the Stanford football team New Year's day.

Knute Rockne, Notre Dame coach, visited the Pasadena hospital and learned Harry Stuhldreher, his quarterback, had a broken ankle bone in a cast; Joe Bach a strained vertebre, and Bill Cerney two fractured ribs, evidences of Stanford struggle.

"The football season is over," said Rockne, "I have not been approached with a proposal to hold a game in Los Angeles, Jan. 10, and don't know who would make it."

"Notre Dame came to the Coast to play one game, and one game it will be. My boys will meet no other Western eleven."

MLLE. LENGLEN WINS TWO MATCHES IN NET TOURNAMENT AT CANNES

By the Associated Press.

CANNES, France, Jan. 3.—Suzanne Lenglen appeared on the local tennis courts yesterday with her old doubles partner, Elizabeth Ryan, and demonstrated, according to observers, that she had recovered her former speed and sizzling service.

The Lenglen-Ryan combination walked away with two matches, defeating Miss L. Hall and Mrs. Wentworth Smith, 6—0, 6—2, and Mrs. Hillyard and Mlle. St. Omer Roy, 6—0, 6—0.

Today Suzanne and Miss Ryan are to take on the Misses Franch and Bennett, the latter a 16-year-old phenom.

TWENTY-EIGHTH INSTALLMENT.

AND how had those seven years changed Flora Lee, Marchesa de San Pilar? She had had her eyebrows plucked. She affected a cosmetic which makes the skin very pale to contrast with the rouge on the lips. She wore costumes of parrot green with remarkably brief skirts and the first pair of short-toed sandals to be seen in that section of the south. Miss Sunshine Buckner called her a Cocotte and Jimmy Wilder, sipping Miss Sunshine's sherry, pronounced it Cookoo.

It was to the old Peake house that the beautiful Marchesa brought her luggage, which was light, and her story which was vague. If she bore a weight of sorrow it was unapparent to her sister, Margaret, who listened with amazement and later with amusement to her lively talk. Her chief treasure seemed to be a French bedspread, a triumph of patient needles plied before the Deluge. There were legendary animals grouped in splendid arabesques at the corners; at the center a crusader's crest presided over a rather wicked motto in old French, traced in purest white on a scroll of tarnished metal thread.

"It's beautiful," decided Margaret, then translating the central motto, "But how horrid!"

"Isn't it?" chimed Flora Lee with the little foreign accent she had acquired. "I'll sleep again in my adorable old bed—I've always missed it, honey. And with this spread over me I won't have a shred of reputation left."

All of which was characteristic of Flora Lee; Margaret, who soon got used to seeing the massive embroidery stretched out between her sister's guardian swans, regarded it somehow as an exhibit in the sorry case of Flora Lee and her Don Carlos. But just what was the sorry case Nobody knew and the young Marchesa was generous with inexactitudes.

The Elder Statesladies of Satsuma ventured this and ventured that. Some said that Bunny had quit her overnight, others that he had endured while she regaled herself in more exalted company. A tourist had seen her in one of the cafes in Madrid — a place which Victoria would have called Bohemian, she had been rioting with such American waifs and strays as drink and borrow in foreign capitals. After a deal of such evidence the verdict was rendered. Flora Lee had become impossible. Dit it matter to the Satsumas? Certainly not. Despite the blasted credit of her family, despite unpretty speeches from old ladies who minced no words behind her back, she remained a Peake. And a Peake had stooped a little to marry a San Pilar.

But if her own caste measured, appraised, discussed her according to their own standards, Admah Holtz saw her in quite a different light. Indeed, it is to be doubted if in all his peculiar relations with this woman he ever really saw her. He visioned her instead. She always came to him in a cloud of self-created light, something that blinded and exalted. His worship was beyond analysis, beyond the reach of justice. On one moonstruck night her little head had rested on his shoulder. There had been no love in that. She had yielded to him as she might have yielded to any other pillow, yet he worshiped her quite without understanding. The cool capriciousness with which she had invited him to her house, and insulted him with an absent-minded smile, should have worked a cure for his diseased ambition. It would have been more than an eye-opener for a worldly man. But Admah with all his love of material success was never worldly. He liked to be deceived.

When Flora Lee came back Admah was in his late thirties. He still carried the wound that she had given him, but the pain reacted in a curious way. He blamed her not at all. The Money Devil was the scapegoat upon which he turned his spleen. Money. "Get the coin," as Elmer Hemingway had put it. Let the Satsumas bluff as they would, First Citizens were ranked by the checks they could write.

On that bald principle Admah had done not so badly. The war might have made another story for him, but when he sought to volunteer a conscientious surgeon insisted that he had flat feet, a disability which did not interfere with his being drafted and left to moulder in a training camp. This camp had been near town, making it convenient for Sergeant Holt to direct his brother Jo—providentially found unfit for service—so that the Candy Holtz Idea did not languish during a sugar shortage. Hersinger, the proud confectioner of Grand avenue, had been less fortunate. Germanic sympathies did not make for prosperity in the Anglo-Saxon South.

In 1919 the sign Candy Holtz beautifully engraved on a silver board, made its unostentatious appearance over the door where Hersinger had once stood to fawn upon the ladies of Satsuma.

CHAPTER 46.

Hersinger's—for the town still called it that, in spite of the change of sign—had for years been a favorite rendezvous. The Yankee Invasion, which was complete by 1921, altered the general character of the town, but the shopping district still held to its old axis. Hersinger's store front, almost opposite the Federal Building, continued to invite the younger set to morning ice cream sodas and matronly bargain hunters to chicken salad luncheons in the rear. Hersinger's was rated as "nice," and under Admah Holtz's management it did not fall in the niceties. Satsuma clansladies liked Mr. Holtz because he was so quiet and obliging, and his delivery service was prompter than Hersinger's had been.

In 1921 Admah had belonged to the Rotary Club and one or two other national organizations. Since the disastrous tea party in 1913, when he had appeared in tobacco brown and very tight shoes, he had made some progress in that sophomoric problem. What the Well-Dressed Man Will Wear. Monty Fernback, who had become an automobile agent, introduced him to a traveling tailor with New York samples. The best barber at the Hamilton Hotel kept his vigorous, wavy hair in reasonable condition. A powerfully built, active man on the young side of 40, he made a presentable appearance, as a few young women admitted. He entered Hersinger's with a quiet air of ownership, kept his eye on everything, knew everybody, and, most important of all, he wasn't intrusive. The Satsumas hated tradespeople to be intrusive.

He was moving toward middle age, a growing figure in a world of figures. His eyes no longer dreamed—they had grown almost fiercely awake. All the time he was working, planning, conquering—for what? Elmer, the usher, had said, "Get the coin," and Admah was getting it. For what again? Maybe it was for the satisfaction it gave him to feel his feet planted on material things. People, though a little patronizingly perhaps, now addressed him as Mr. Holtz. He took their orders without the turn of an eyelash, always agreeable, always scheming toward another rise on the ladder.

Jo, who had grown balder and timider and shabbier with the years, continued to run the Red Front Store on State street. He had moaned "Look out!" when Admah planned to buy Hersinger's. He would have nothing to do with the Hersinger, idea and as a result Admah found himself in sole proprietorship of a very profitable enterprise. Here to the best of his ability he served a frivolous world, knowing his customers by name as you might know a row of puppets.

More humanly there was Margaret Peake. His life had crossed hers again by the merest chance of fortune. A colony of new rich, who had conquered the hills along the River boulevard, patronized Hersinger's more liberally than the Satsumas had ever done. They were particular about their dinner favors, these hot-spending people. Admah Holtz, who had once dreamed of iron and conquest as he shoveled coke into Moloch's mouth at the Plow and Tool Works, found himself in 1921 seeking pretty place cards for the local plutocracy. Eastern stationers sent trite samples. One day he came upon a row of impertinent, amusing paper figures in the window of an obscure bookstore. Sweet little ladies, six inches high, pirouetted in dresses of silk and lace. They were quaint, and they were salable. He sought their origin and found that they were made by Miss Margaret Peake.

Subsequently Hersinger's sold Margaret's paper dolls, and in that way she passed through Admah's zone. She was a peculiar girl, he thought, with a curiosity that wasn't prying exactly—it was too kind for that. Quite without self-consciousness he told her about himself and his business. She liked to hear about everything, and their friendship was so unaffected that it gave him a shock sometimes when he remembered that she was a Peake and not to be treated like common folks. She was straightforward. No fuss and fixin's. The kind of a girl a man likes to have around. Right good lookin', too, in a sensible way. . . . He had heard about the Jimmy Wilder case; how she had given him the gate, for no particular reason, and settled down to be an old maid. Too bad. She'd have made a right sweet wife for somebody.

If Admah saw Flora Lee through a blinding light he reserved for her elder sister the cool spectacles of realism. Margaret was a comfort to his reasoning mind; Flora Lee touched him like a firebrand, bringing devastation. He never forgot her and never mentioned her name through all the years she was away.

So much for the poor reflection of his love. Then came the afternoon when Flora Lee appeared again.

"If Bunny ever had a human emotion," a sweet, rough voice was drawling over one of Hersinger's glass-topped tables, "he must have checked it at the Customs House . . . descended from a raft of those dear old Crusaders who used to lock their wives in iron cages then go to some darned old holy war . . . bet they had all the showgirls they wanted in Jerusalem. But if the wife borrowed a file and started to saw her way out"——

Admah looked around and saw her seated in a group of laughing admirers, some of the young married set from the Sycamore Club. Her hazel eyes were vivacious, her mouth was open, showing straight, white teeth, her yellow hair, cut short, clung round her forehead like a golden cloud. Vaguely Admah recognized other members of the group. Hunter O'Neill, who had been married and divorced within a year, was smuggling a flask under the edge of the table. Admah should have put a stop to it. But his resolution evaporated, as it always did at sight of Flora Lee.

How beautiful she was! He stood two yards from her chair, unaware of the business around him. Amidst the friendly cackle of her audience she went hilariously on:

"Some day I'll write a guide book and tell the world what to avoid in Spain. There's the dear little flea—the only Spaniard I ever met with any pep. Except the mother-in-law—if you've never been to Spain you've never seen a mother-in-law. Mamma San Pilar! She used to go round the place counting my cigarette stubs."

"Must have been some counter," suggested Hunter O'Neill, adoring her with bloodshot eyes.

"She was the human adding machine. She used to walk in her sleep like Lady—you know that one in Shakspeare—and when she walked she counted. She counted my hairpins and the buttons on my underwear and the bottles under my bed. I certainly knew all about the Spanish Inquisition when I got through with Bunny's mother. And before I'd marry another Spaniard I'd marry"—— Was it an accident that her eyes lit on Admah Holtz and lingered an instant without recognition? Then she finished, "I'd marry a jockey."

"They're doin' right well this year," suggested O'Neill, unscrewing the stopper on his generous silver flask.

"What's the style in America?" drawled Flora Lee. "Do we drink straight out of the bottle?"

O'Neill looked around, and spying Admah, held up a finger with a pleasant, patronizing, "Hello, Mr. Holtz!"

"Good evenin', sir." Recovered from his surprise and from the emotions which, for an instant, had gnashed at each other like savage dogs, Admah came forward. The eyes of the group were upon him, but he saw only Flora Lee's. They were splendid in their lazy indifference.

"Say, Mr. Holtz," began O'Neill, lowering his voice, "I wonder if you could send us a quart of White Rock and some glasses. We've got everything else." He raised his flask under the table edge and wagged it significantly.

"I'm sorry, Mr. O'Neill," replied Admah with a sort of cheerful coldness, "it's against the law, you know."

Today's Winning Puzzle

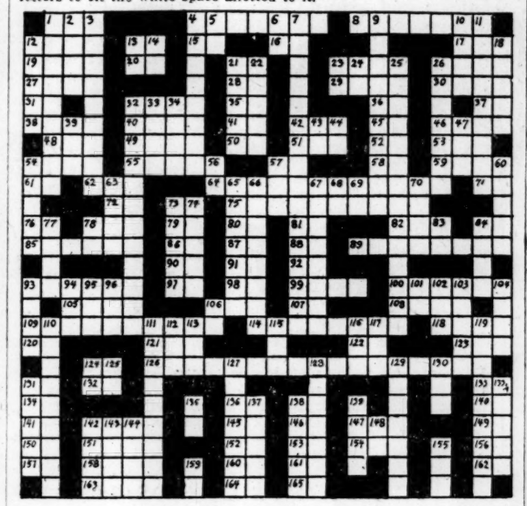

The puzzle printed below wins the prize of $10 offered daily by the Post-Dispatch for the most original cross-word enigma submitted to this paper. It was contributed by J. L. Woodruff, 649 North Thirty-seventh street, East St. Louis, Ill. The solution of this puzzle will be printed Monday.

Each number in the puzzle indicates the position of the first letter of a word.

Each word reads from left to right (horizontal) or downward (vertical), according to position. Lettered in correctly, words that cross will interlock.

Each number in the white squares also refers to a definition in the accompanying table.

Each definition suggests a word possessing the exact number of letters to fit the white space allotted to it.

Curried Shoulder of Veal.

SELECT a thick shoulder and have it boned carefully, tearing it as little as possible. Prepare a stuffing of a half cupful of fine crumbs, a small cupful of boiled rice, a grated onion, a cupful of large washed currants, a tablespoonful of grated canned pineapple, pepper, salt and a teaspoonful of dried mint. Make a curry by melting a tablespoonful of butter and rubbing into it a tablespoonful of flour and a teaspoonful of curry powder, cook three or four minutes, then add a half cupful of cream and the same of milk. When thickened and smooth, mix with the dressing to bind it and stuff the meat. Roast two hours or longer until tender.

HOW TO KNOW YOUR FRIENDS

By Sophie Irene Loeb

SOPHIE IRENE LOEB

TWO families returned from a trip together at a summer resort—bitter enemies. One of the women explained the situation to me something like this:

"You see, we never knew them very well at home, although we had visited each other and gone out to parties together for a long time. But we had not been in constant touch with each other morning, noon, and night, as we were on this vacation. We learned so many things about them that we did not know—their dispositions, their mean moments, their petty ways.

"It was only when we got away together and were thrown so much in each other's company that we 'found them out,' as it were. You know, you can get better acquainted with people when you are with them for two or three days together than in any other way. You may go on for years in town, being friendly with people, yet not actually know them."

The woman is quite right. You may think you know your friends, but the only way to get to understand people is to live with them. And that is the trouble with many marriages. Young people have good times together, enjoying each other's company, thinking they can stand anything. But after they live together and see each other's little idiosyncrasies and shortcomings, they change their feelings.

Many a woman has learned to dislike her husband because of some little habit he has had that she didn't know about, and vice versa. The dislike creeps on unawares. The way to know anybody is to be with him a great deal under different circumstances.

Many people have friendships that are of the fair weather kind. That is, they will be together on happy occasions and they never have seen their friends under any other circumstances.

I have an acquaintance whom I thought was very austere and rather unfriendly. This person visited me this summer for a week-end and I never found any one so charming and delightful. She was just the opposite of the mental vision I had of her. It is only the cold exterior that she shows, but to those she loves there is great warmth and kindness in her make-up. That is the kind of person one could bank on as a friend.

The way to form a real estimate of friends is at a time when one can be with them under varied conditions; that is, to spend some considerable time together with them. And that is what we fail to do, as a general thing.

The trouble is—especially in the large town—that people do not visit. They go to places together, but it is a rare thing for them to spend a whole evening at home and actually learn each others thoughts and ideas and beliefs. Perhaps—who knows—the most enjoyable times in the world can be found in such association—more so than in being entertained at a theater or some amusement place. And then, when the test comes, as in the case above, they will not have been mistaken.

The old-time friendly intercourse that the poets write about must have given a great deal of genuine pleasure in comradeship with those one cared about. Such times should be recalled, even in this day of rush and flurry.

FASHION FRILLS

NEW YORK.—As in the Far West, the wide open spaces in modern ballrooms are growing scarcer. This is due to the continued vogue for bouffant dance frocks among the young and slim. Slimness is the real consideration although the modern distended skirt is far more graceful and becoming even to rather plump figures than the old-time crinoline.

NEW YORK. — The spring tailored suits are not abbreviated so far as the coats are concerned. Perhaps that is why they call them redingote costumes when a shorter name would do as well. The sleeves are narrow, the lines straight and the lapels rather short.

LONDON.—Basket shoes sound incongruous, but they are not. One of the most attractive and latest production of the shoemaker's art is entirely composed, except sole and seet, of basket weave or narrow leather strips colored in gold, silver, steel and blue or combinations of those shades.

• • •

PARIS. — There are enough pleats, but they don't go around. They are placed only at the front or sides of the newest frocks. One of these of black velvet has a row of heavy pleats falling from a diagonal line of roses, embroidered in salmon and blue with diamente foliage, placed at the hip line.

THE WOMAN OF I

By MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

MAXIMS OF A MODERN MAID

MARRIAGE is like Prohibition: until you try either you know how difficult to enforce are its laws, how numerous its alleviations, how it doth make hypocrites of us all.

• • •

When a man, instead of choosing his wife's Christmas present, asks his stenographer to shop for it or writes a check—that's when the honeymoon ends.

It's always so hard for a woman to buy a Christmas present for a man—even when he's her husband and obligingly gives her the money for it!

No wise woman ever looks into the past of the man with a gift for love-making. What she's interested in are results.

The trouble with the marriage partnership is that one partner does altogether too much sleeping—after dinner, when he might be taking the other partner to a party or a show.

Among the reasons why the successful business woman, male prototype, often remains unwed is because it's so much to find a perpetually appreciative audience of one that wears trousers instead of skirts.

• • •

A man's woman may be defined as a female who considers a invitation to a dove luncheon an insult.

PHILOSOPHICAL PHRASES.

It is the nature of man to err, of a fool to persevere in error.

A wish is properly the desire of a man sitting or lying still, but an act of the will is a man of business vigorously going about his work.

Envy is an enemy to himself.

Money amassed either commands or obeys each of us.

A fervent and diligent mind prepared for all things.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIO

A Tiny Milk House.

A wooden box outside the door, with a lid on hinges, makes a splendid little house for the milk until you arrive downstairs to bring it in. It keeps it clean and cool, the sun or stormy elements being placed in the refrigerator.

Soiled Ties.

If you have an inexpensive soapy set and the wooden bowl have become very soiled, wash them carefully with a soft cloth and white soap. Dry on a clean towel and give them a coat of clear varnish. They will look better than new and the varnish will prevent their becoming soiled quickly. The quickest method of varnishing is to place the ties in their tray, dip and varnish a whole tray at once.

• • •

Varied Thoughts.

Pink cheeks that come from drinking milk will not wash off.

Cornmeal and vinegar will remove fruit stains from the hands.

Try to have the heels of all your shoes about the same height.

Never serve roasts without removing any skewers or anything that may be attached.

Did You Every Try—

Salt on your fingers when cleaning poultry, fish or meat?

To prevent the hands from slipping.

To sew over the frayed edges of buttonholes or entirely worn them over? It will give a new appearance to the garment.

Very good pancakes may be made, using sour milk. One or two eggs, beaten light, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful salt, one pint of sour milk with a level teaspoonful of baking soda dissolved in it, flour to make a batter. A little melted butter may also be added—it adds to the tenderness of the cakes.

Nut Cookies.

Two cups brown sugar, 1 cup of butter (butterine may be used with as good results), 2 whole eggs (well beaten), 3½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon of soda, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup walnuts or pecans, ½ teaspoon salt. Make it in a loaf and set in a cool place over night. Slice thin and bake in the morning.

Fudge.

IF YOU want a fudge that is a little different try this: Boil two cupfuls light brown sugar, three-fourths cupful milk, two heaping tablespoonfuls cocoa and butter size of a walnut until it forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Remove from fire, add one teaspoonful vanilla and beat until thick, then pour into buttered tin. Cook two cupfuls sugar and two-thirds cupful of milk together until it forms a soft ball in cold water. Remove from fire and add one-half cupful of shredded cocoanut and one teaspoon almond flavoring, beat thoroughly and pour over the top of the cooled chocolate fudge. When cold cut into squares.

The Young Otters Are Warned

The young who heed an elder's warning
Show evidence of wisdom's dawning.
—Old Mother Nature.

"DO you remember the terrible two-legged creature who chased us on our way from the Laughing Brook to this brook?" Little Joe Otter asked the two young Otters.

Both nodded their heads. "I guess I do!" exclaimed one. "He gave me a dreadful fright."

"Have you seen anything of him since we have been staying over here?" Mrs. Otter asked.

This time both the young Otters shook their heads. "No," said the one who had spoken before. "The truth is, I have forgotten all about him. I guess he doesn't know we are over here.'

"I guess he does," said Little Joe Otter. "I know he does. He has set traps for us."

"What are traps?" asked one of the young Otters.

"They are terrible things with awful jaws, which are hidden where they are not likely to be seen and are always ready to jump up and seize an Otter by the leg. Then they will never let go, and there is no way of making them let go."

The eyes of the young Otters grew round with wonder and fear. "But what have they to do with that terrible creature who chased us?" asked one of them.

"Those traps belong to him," replied Little Joe. "He is the one who has hidden those traps, hoping to catch us. If one of you should be caught in one of those traps, that terrible two-legged creature would come and kill you."

"But how do you know that he has hidden any of those dreadful traps around here?" inquired the smallest Otter.

"Your father has just found one," replied Mrs. Otter. "It was set over on that old log where your father has been in the habit of eating his fish. Probably there are more traps, and so it is not going to be safe for any of us to go to the places we have been in the habit of going. That means that you must not use the slippery slide again, not even once. You must keep away from the bank at the place where we have been in the habit of climbing it to reach the top of the slippery slide. Each of you must promise not to once use that little path we have made across the point to reach that other bend in the brook."

"I guess I do!" exclaimed one. "He gave me a dreadful fright"

"But can't we slide any more?" asked one young Otter, looking very much disappointed. "There won't be any fun if we can't go sliding."

"It is better to go without fun than to lose your life," said Little Joe Otter gravely. "However, we will make a new slippery slide. There is one thing more. If one of you should find a dead fish, keep away from it."

"Why," demanded one of the young Otters.

"Because the only safe fish for an Otter is a live fish. No matter how hungry you are or how hard it is to catch a fish, don't be tempted by a dead fish. There is likely to be a trap hidden close by. If the fishing were not so good here we would move on at once. Now remember what your mother and I have told you. Keep away from every place you have been in the habit of going to, and don't touch a dead fish."

A Crown Roast of Pork.

SELECT fresh young spare ribs and have seven ribs cut from each side. Have the bones "Frenched" neatly, then have the ribs fitted together crown fashion, with the meat inside, and tied firmly. Dust with pepper and salt, cover each bone tip with a thick paste made of flour and water to keep them from getting burned, wipe the pan with a cut bud of garlic, then set in the roast. Put a sliced onion, some coarsely chopped celery, a half cupful of chopped or grated pineapple, a generous lump of butter, a half teaspoonful of mint, fresh or dried, and a cupful of stock into the pan to baste with and to make the gravy foundation. Cover the meat and cook steadily an hour, then uncover and cook another hour and baste frequently. Have ready a mixture of mashed potato, a few dry crumbs, and a quarter cupful each of applesauce and the grated pineapple. Fill the top of the roast and let brown nicely in the oven, then lift the roast to a hot platter, remove the crust and top each bone with the paper chop rosettes, and garnish the dish with fresh cress sprays and panned spinach in little crustades. Serve creamed onions, potatoes au gratin, baked sweet potatoes and pineapple fritters.

MEDITATIONS —OF A— MARRIED WOMAN

By HELEN ROWLAND

MAN'S BUTTONS.

JUST why a man should have so many buttons on his clothes no WOMAN has ever discovered—unless it it to provide occupation for a wife who might otherwise be "idle" for a few moments.

Woman may carelessly trust herself to "snaps," hooks or safety pins, but a man insists upon being buttoned to the neck and then trimmed all over with buttons. Perhaps they give him a sense of security.

He wears buttons on his coat, his trousers, his vest—whole ROWS of them! Buttons on his shirts, cuff buttons, collar buttons, buttons on his pockets, buttons on his undies and buttons on his pajamas. He would button his hat on somehow, if anybody would let him.

And every man is a sleuth where his buttons are concerned. He can detect a missing button on any of his garments in the DARK. Sew on ALL his buttons, except the one on the back—and SEE if you can fool him!

A wife who believes in "preparedness" may forget to order the coal, but she never lets her supply of BUTTONS run out—white buttons, black buttons, large buttons, small buttons, metal buttons, bone buttons, cloth buttons!

Yet, in his innocent inconsistency, a man always puts the most buttons where the strain is smallest. Rows of buttons down the front of his shirts and vests, where there is no strain whatever; at least three buttons on his suit-coat, though he rarely fastens more than one; a button on each hip-pocket—and ornamental buttons on his cuffs.

But only ONE button on the BACK, where it would do the most good!

And never more than one collar-button to his name, no matter how many automobiles he may keep!

Not satisfied with all these, he decks himself out in fraternity buttons, Rotary buttons, campaign buttons, delegate buttons, Elk buttons, Masonic buttons—buttons, buttons, buttons!

The first thing a man does when his wife presents him with a home-made silk shirt is to count the buttons on it. If there are less than five his Christmas day is utterly ruined and his faith in her intelligence shattered forever.

* * *

If any woman hopes to meet her husband in Heaven she had better have a complete supply of buttons buried with her.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Summing Up.

OF wealth I have a meager share,
my lot an huhmble one;
I own no gardens, wide and fair,
no fields that woo the sun. No verdant valleys stretch away where silver waters shine, no forest ranks in proud array grace lands that I call mine. Nor is my treasure safely stored as misers keep their gold, a splendid, shining, secret horde for greedy hands to hold.
But I have riches all would prize, whatever their estate; for me, life's rarest visions rise, life's sweetest fancies wait. I have a dream that does not die, a friend forever true, so naught of poverty know I, nor care's unlovely crew. And I have steadfast faith that sees the stars beyond the strife, a courage that can drain the lees, yet love the wine of life. Scant treasure, this, of lands or gold, yet wealth without an end is mine, for in my heart
I hold dream, courage, faith and friend.

The Man on the Sandbox

by L. C. Davis

AFTER THE PARTY.

WHEN the morning after is bleak and drear,
As joy-bells ring on the glad New Year;
When you feel like you've swallowed a pair of socks,
When your gears don't mesh and your engine knocks,
When you try to stand on your shaky legs
And you get the odor of ham and eggs;
When, with coarse invective and language crude,
You curse the man that invented
food.
When your head is swelled like a poisoned pup
And you think that you'll never again get up.
When you cough and splutter and choke and gag,
And try to swallow the noisome
rag,
That seems completely to fill your mouth
And make it feel like a ten-years' drouth.
When you hear the ice in the pitcher clink
And you grab it up and you drink and drink
And you think that you never can get enough.
Of the grand and glorious, rare
old stuff.
When into the mirror you take a peek
And see instead of a well-known sheik,
An uncouth object with mottled skin
That looks like something the cat brought in—
You think with a sigh forlorn and sad:
"What a glorious party we must have had!"

IT WOULD.

Wouldn't it be a grand and glorious feeling if somebody would invent a dance where the fiddler didn't insist on having his quid pro quo.

However, as the violinist insists on getting his it's all up to the devotee of Terpischore.

Some maintain that it is possible to have a corking good time without corks. I dunno.

Not a Yale, Harvard or Princeton man got a job on Walter Camp's first team. However, the glee clubs will probably make the first flight.

The competition for those mythical jobs is getting keener every year. Hundreds of top-notchers didn't have a ghost of a chance.

Looks like the only way for theaters and business houses to keep their money is to have an underground chute connecting with the bank.

WHAT TO DO!

It's a terrible state of affairs, men. Maybe we'll have to do away with money and go back to the old-fashioned system of trading in kind. Guess you could get a front seat at the Follies for nine dozen eggs.

It might delay traffic a little while the conductor was making change for a potato.

"Lands in Jail Three Days After Wedding."

Only fair. The record, we believe, is one day flat.

QUITE SO.

Count that day whose low descending sun
Sees not a million bucks bequeathed to Washington.

The klan is going to put on an auto race at Denver. No fair looking under the hoods of the autos.

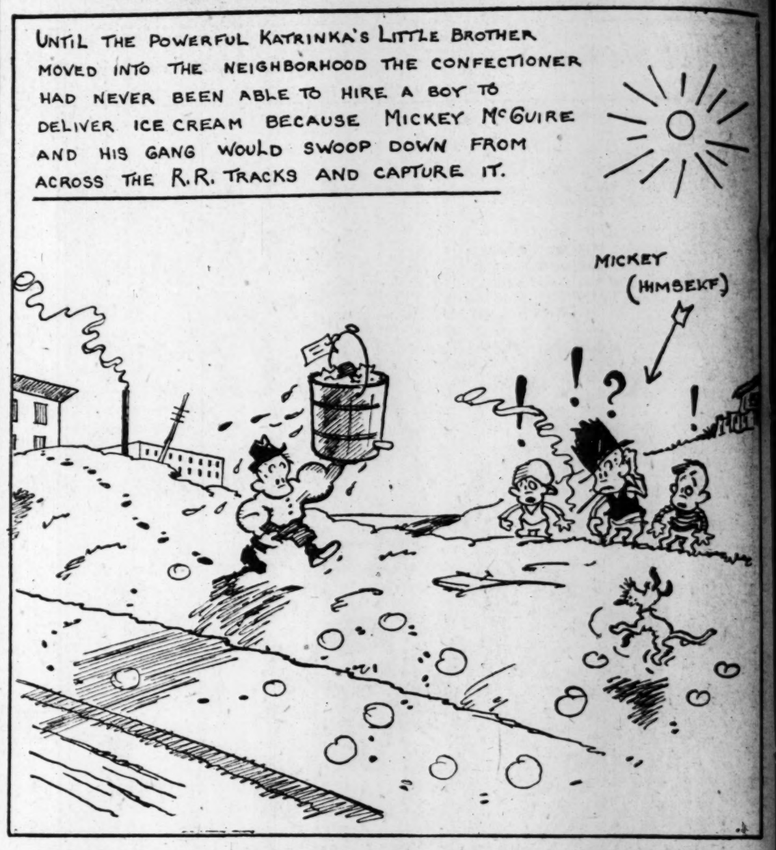

LIKEWISE, HA, HA!

COMES wafted on the breeze
An ancient mildewed wheeze;
But as it comes by radio
We hold our sides and laugh, "Ho, ho!"
